THE FOOD AND GOLD QUESTION.

In its review of the markets on Nov. 4, the Examiner says:

"The price of gold is again rising, and transactions in the precious metals are growing brisk with the brokers. As long as the Legislature was in session, with a bill pending for the suppression of this abominable traffic in gold, the brokers' occupation, like that of Othello, was gone, (for the time;) but now that this danger has been dissipated by the adjournment of the Legislature, the brokers rush into the field, even more greedy than ever. Unless something is done to check this infernal trading in gold and Yankee money, our currency will continue to depreciate and the paper of the Government become a sport of circumstance. There was always an abundance of gold in the country until the brokers and 'blockade-runners' struck hands; and since the day of that ingenious league the currency of the country has gone down—down—down. We now have to contend with, what is enough to sicken the heart of man at the stupidity and maladministration of our financial [illegible] Gold, selling at $12 50—buying, $11 50; silver selling at $10—buying at $9. State bank-notes [illegible]ettled, but may be quoted: Virginia, buying at $2—selling at $2 50@$2 75; North Carolina buying at $2 50—selling at $3; Georgia and South Carolina buying at $3 25—selling at $3 50@$3 75.

The question of food is becoming a serious one. There is plenty in the country, but the trouble is that the farmers will withhold their supplies, though everything has been done to incite their patriotism, many of the commission merchants in this city having offered to sell flour and meal consigned to them without charge of commission. Yet this has failed to open the doors of their granaries, and the consequence is that though the wheat crop of last Summer was a splendid one, there is not a barrel of flour to be had in the city at any price! The market is well nigh bear of corn meal and corn, both of which readily command $18 a bushel. Other necessaries of life are scarce, and command high prices; Sugar, common brown, $3 to $3 25; crushed, $4 50 to $5; bacon, $2 50 to $2 60 for hog round; fresh meats, $1 25 to $1 50 per pond; the same for sausage; chickens, $5 to $6 per pair; butter, $4 50 to $5 per pound; coffee, $8 50 to $9; tea $18 to $20 per pound; lard, $2 per pound; molasses, $18 per gallon; sorghum, $12. The season for vegetables is about over, which causes the prices of meats and groceries to rule higher.

YANKEES IN THE SOUTH.

From the Richmond Examiner.

The Europeans among us are not numerous enough to affect the complexion of our general society, and if we were well rid of the Northern mechanics and Northern adventurers who infest our towns we should have less cause to complain of the Yankee hue which is spreading over certain of our communities. Here no conflicting interests array section against section along lines which may, at any moment, become lines of battle, and though straitlaced philosophers may suppose that the evil day is only deferred, and may descry in the distance the points of severance, our argument is not affected by their forebodings, for thus far there is less likelihood of a war between Virginia and Alabama than between Indiana and Massachusetts.

Here we do not feel the weight of a leaden tyranny in every breath we draw; we do not cower before Provost-Marshals, nor worship the Fetish of a flag; we do not prostrate ourselves in mute adoration before the awful majesty of the Government. We are men, and walk erect. A military despotism in the South is a remote contingency, not an expedient discussed in every issue of the Press and advocated in plain language by every despairing friend of order.

They said that we were tyrants, dancing on a slumbering volcano, and as soon as the Yankee stokers should stir up the sluggish mass, we were to be consumed by the bursting flames, crushed by the falling stones, imbedded in the molten lava, and dredged with the blistering ashes. The Yankee stokers have stirred up the sluggish mass, and there has been no explosion. We are neither consumed, nor crushed, nor imbedded, nor dredged. Some of the useful fires which we have employed at our forge have been put out by the Yankees, and some have gone out of themselves, but they did not burn their masters, and the loss has been simply a loss of labor and of capital. The South can never be a St. Domingo, in spite of all that the ingenuity of Yankee hate can do; for our negroes are better Christians and truer gentlemen than their would-be liberators.

Nor have our enemies succeeded in setting the poor within our borders against the rich; and all their pamphlets against the slave-owning oligarchy have been fruitless of mischief in all those sections were the so-called oligarchy exists. It would be a thousand pities if our farmers, by their ill-bred conduct, should lend a handle to our fanatical foe; but if the storm should come, it will be a mere puff of wind in comparison with the tempest which is brewing at the North under "the dreaded name of Demogorgon."

Nor are we much disturbed at the opprobrious title of oligarchs. Oligarchies are bad enough for those who do not like them, but they have the advantage of a tough vitality; and oligarchy or not, our form of Government and our social organization give promise of a longer life than the mob-rule of the North, with attendant man-worshins and monkey-worships. Not that we think that ours is the best of possible Republics, and the present the most agreeable epoch in the world's history. There are endless abuses rife in the Confederacy, and many a man, since the beginning of the war, has wished to change places with his grandfather or his grandson; but the fabric of our social life remains, as a whole, unshaken, and in lieu of pleasure we must console ourselves with the philosophical reflection, that, after all, happiness is not the highest good, and that our descendants will wish they had lived in the stirring times of the great revolution.—Enquirer.

STATE OF SOCIETY IN THE SOUTH.

From the Richmond Enquirer.

In this time of war and revolution there are so many and various vices—it is horr ble to think of. And to do us justice we are all beginning to be painfully alive to the enormity of the growing evil; and each of us zealous and urgent for the reformation or condign punishment of the vices of all the rest. Blockade-runners scathe and denounce the extortioners—meaning the farmers—and call for sharp penalties on the greedy wretches. Farmers pour their imprecations upon the extortioners—meaning the blockade-runners—and want to know how long their crimes are to go unwhipped of justice. The man who is amassing hogsheads full of Confederate Treasury bills, indignantly wonders why every one else does not fund his paper to an enormous extent, knowing that the more bills are funded by others, the higher will be the value of his hogsheads full. Planters pass resolutions, in most excellent spirit, pledging everybody to sell his produce freely, at Government prices; each planter knowing (alas! that we should say so) that if all the others sell cheap he will have the more to sell dear. We will praise with our whole might the virtue of patriotic self-sacrifice: and are most happy to see it exemplified in other men: and unaffectedly wonder whether those who trade and make money upon the necessities of their country, think they have souls to be saved. Of late there has been a great manifestation of patriotic rage against every sort of iniquity, and, to judge by our newspapers, never was surely a community in this world so wedded to purity and virtue, so scandalized at the shadow of vice. In the very crisis and paroxysm of the French revolution, when traitors were plotting against the convention, when aristocrats were threatening an invasion across the Rhine, and farmers (worst of all) were hiding their grain instead of bringing it into market, a decree was proposed by a conventioner "for the arrest of all the scoundrels and thieves." He hoped that his zeal would exempt him at least from the arrest.

We are of purer eyes than to behold iniquity. It is not enough to whip gamblers—nobody will pity them much, those who patronise them least of all: but now another censor morum at the Press, fired with zeal for morality and virtue, calls loudly for a law to flog those helpless females, fair but all too frail, who are as invariable and necessary a concomitant of large armies as the vultures and the buzzards are. We formally object to this flogging. It is true we hate vice ourselves and love to punish the vicious, but a line must be drawn somewhere, and we draw it right here. Whip gamblers if you will; they are men. They, if they don't like that usage, can quit being gamblers and become members of the Legislature, and of Congress, where they will have a chance of whipping others, and can even propose resolutions for the "arrest of all scoundrels and thieves," to their own great satisfaction and the vast improvement of their kind. But let it be recollected that women are rather too much at our mercy; we make all the laws; we mould and govern the whole economic structure of society, and by our arrangements in those departments, we compel a certain percentage of the poor girls the exact proportion is known to statistics) to sell themselves to us for our pleasure. We doubt if it would be brave or gallant to turn upon them afterward, and apply to their poor white shoulders so many scores of lashes, well laid on. Oh, ye Legislators! Ye members of the universal Society for suppression of vice! We should wish to see the voting upon that bill, and how each lawmaker's cheek would flush with a dusky red as he recorded the coward vote.

But we are told that these poor souls make a public scandal by the outrageous extravagance in which they live, and outshine on the public streets, with their blockade-run finery, the modest and virtuous maidens and matrons of the city. 'Tis true, 'tis pity; but it was ever so, and ever will be.

THE PRISONERS.

The Examiner of Nov. 9, says: "On Sunday, four hundred and fifty of the Yankee prisoners taken in the fight at Philadelphia, Tennessee, were received at the Libby. About three hundred more are yet to come, and will probably arrive to-day.

There are twelve commissioned officers among those already arrived.

Yesterday one thousand additional prisoners were added to the number on Belle-Isle, making its population about four thousand six hundred. They are accommodated in additional tents.

The officers at the Libby were yesterday supplied with a blanket apiece from the large consignment recently received from the North.

In the Virginia House of Delegates, on Nov. 1,

Mr. HAYMOND called up the resolution, offered early in the session, making inquiry of the Confederate Government of the number of paroled Yankee prisoners going at large in Richmond, and the nature of the oath they have subscribed to.

Mr. HAYMOND said he had understood there were at least two hundred and fifty of the creatures in the city.

Mr. BROCKS thought the House had better let that subject alone. It was one that belonged eminently to the Confederate Government. The House had already this session been embroiled in one difficulty or misunderstanding with the Government, and he was of the opinion that they had better cultivate amicable relations.

The motion to take up the resolution was withdrawn.

The Enquirer has these items:

"The gratifying intelligence is at hand, announcing that about five thousand of the Yankees now quartered in Richmond will be immediately shipped to Danville and Lynchburgh—2,000 to the former and 3,000 to the latter place. This will leave about 8,000 in Richmond, which it is to be hoped will be reduced, if possible, to none at all.

We are requested to state that no beef is impressed for the Yankee prisoners, but it is bought—we presume at the 'schedule prices,' which is about the same thing. Whether or not, the beef is consumed by a population that don't belong here, and the sooner it is taken off to some more rural and less exhausted spot, the better for the community. It seems that even war won't deliver us from our curse—Yankee monopoly."

GEN. BUTLER.

From the Richmond Examiner.

That the military authorities of the United States had fallen back on the plans of McCLELLAN, and were about to try another Peninsula campaign against Richmond, were rumors so often repeated from so many different sources, that they almost attained the certitude of well-established fact. They derived strong confirmation from the movements of FOSTER'S troops, on the south side of the James and in Eastern North Carolina, where they were lately all on the march. But the announcement that BENJAMIN F. BUTLER has been promoted to the supreme command in FOSTER'S military department, again plunges the public into a sea of doubts and speculations. Certainly, the enemy does not mean fighting here. The business of this Gene is to steal, to hang, to torture, to insult the unfortunate, to grind into the dust those who are no longer able to raise a hand even to ward a blow. His business is to illustrate the old axiom that the coward is always cruel, and to be the representative man of his nation. This business he has done, and does do, with a degree of perfection which has concentrated upon him the admiring attention of four continents. But he has at the same time given such satisfying evidence of his disinclination and incapacity for fighting, that his appointment renders it quite clear no such thing is intended on the south side of Virginia. The list of Gen. BUTLER'S battles is short—Big Bethel and the nameless combat with a boss mason in Massachusetts. It will never be lengthened. His work in Virginia will be confined to his own peculiar line. He will render the weeping women and miserable children of Norfolk a little more unhappy than they have hitherto been. He will feed the gallows and the prison with many victims from the class of remaining citizens. But he will not be able to perform one part of his recognized profession. He will not fill his pockets from their property, for they have now none left to be stolen, either by him or his brother.

STIRRING EVENTS AT HAND.

The Marietta Rebel seems to anticipate that we have stirring events at hand. We extract the following from that paper of Friday last:

"Indications are abundant that active operations somewhere around Chattanooga are contemplated very soon, on the part of both the Confederate and Federal commanders. We feel a presentiment that another general engagement is at hand, and that, if a battle may not directly occur, important military moves will be executed which will altogether change the aspect of things, as at present viewed from Lookout Point or Missionary Ridge. We are in possession of information through unquestionable authority, which it would be indiscreet to make public, which goes far to strengthen these convictions. In view of such a prospect, it behooves every patriot to exercise to its fullest, his energy, zeal and earnestness. Upon the people at home devolve the high and responsible duties of not only furnishing all the assistance in their power, by contributions of blankets and clothing, etc., but the duty also of encouraging their friends in the army and stimulating the courage and ardor of the soldiers.

The interest of the whole revolution centres at this point. The two armies likely to be engaged are the largest that have been thrown together during the war. The stake on either side, in the event of a battle, is a mighty one. On one hand, the holding of a territory it has cost much blood and expenditure to possess, and, on the other hand, the recovery of the finest soil of the Confederacy, and the possession of the provision-house which shall feed and clothe its armies. Let your hearts be oak and your nerves be steel, heroic veterans of the Western army. And while 'a soldier's business 'tis to die,' be ever mindful of the sentiment of the Roman bard—

'Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.'"

THE VIRGINIA STATE GUARD AND THE YANKEE GEN. THOMAS.

From the Richmond Examiner.

The community will be surprised, if not gratified, to learn that the height of ambition of Gen. GEORGE B. THOMAS the "bold," successor to ROSECRANS the "dog," at the incipient verge of the war, was a secondary position in the Virginia State Guard of Richmond. So says one of the correspondents with Gen. BRAGG'S army, writing from the front of Chattanooga.

He was in Texas when the State seceded, and expressed himself loudly as a strong Southern man of the Calhoun school. He swore by "G—d he would resign," and did tender his resignation to Gen. TWIGGS, who did not accept it, but advised him to come on to Richmond, and send in his resignation to Washington from this point. THOMAS adopted this suggestion, especially as it enabled him to travel free of expense that far—a great desideratum with a Yankee. THOMAS the "Bold," afterward the "hero of the Chickamauga," came to Richmond on furlough, and soon after made a formal written application to Gov. LETCHER for a post in the State Guard, then commanded by the late Gen. DIMMOCK. Before his application was considered, he just took a run over North, (he had married in Troy, New-York,) to bring his family over, and never returned. But CHASE said once that every man had his price, and it may be the "doubling Thomas" had his. He threw his puny weight in the scale against the South.

Influenced by the desire to confirm a coincidence and parallel so remarkable, we have applied to the Secretary of the Commonwealth, Col. MUMFORD, for any facts establishing the data of THOMAS'S application; but the Secretary did not remember such an incident, or if he did apply, THOMAS was so insignificant at the time as to fail to impress himself upon particular notice, when present, or memory after he was gone.

Strange as it may appear, it is a question whether "Maj.-Gen. G. H. THOMAS, commanding the Yankee Army of the Cumberland," did not once seek a position in the honored State Guard. Thank God, he failed, and the Guard and the State is saved the disgrace, and THOMAS has found the right place, and his level, at last. It may be true, we say, for "truth is stranger than fiction."

(NOTE.—The above story, so far as regards the present commander of the Army of the Cumberland, is all pure fiction.)

AFFAIRS IN NORTH CAROLINA.

THE ELECTIONS.

From the Petersburgh Register, Nov. 4.

Since our issue of yesterday, we have been unable to get any returns from the voting in camp which would justify a conclusion as to the result of the army vote. We believe it will, when received, show that the soldiers of North Carolina are true to the banner which, on so many battle fields, they have so manfully upheld, and manifest their reprobation of the traitors at home who have done so much to sully the escutcheon of a noble old State. About the voting of the citizens, who will vote at home to-day, we have some misgivings. Very late information induces us to believe that in the first district SMITH'S election is, by no means as sure as the friends of the Confederacy would like it to be. Owing to a surplus of candidates in the Goldsboro district, we fear that DR. J. T. LEACH, an extremely ignorant and bad-tempered man, and one withal of late imbued with the quint-essential oil of Holdenism, will be elected. The friends of tolerable sense and free government, however, may be consoled by the reflection that if he ever finds his way to Richmond, he will never do more than answer aye or no when his name is called. If he ever makes a speech, that speech will be his first and last. He will not earn the renown of "Single-Speech HAMILTON," but will be forced to remain "Single-Speech LEACH," and be recognised as such, unless the Speaker allows him to raise a point of order, and go into a dialogue with him. In the Raleigh district matters are doubtful, and we would not be surprised if Turner, the Unionist, beats Arrington, the true man. We shall hope earnestly to the contrary. In the Salisbury District, LANDER, true Confederate, will be elected. In the Morganton District, GAITHER, once "Conservative," but now true, will, we hear, beat his opponents. In the Wadesborough District, it is believed that ASHE, a true man, will be beaten by CHRISTIAN, a Holden "Conservative." In the Mountain or Buncombe District, DAVIDSON, Holden "Conservative," will probably be reelected. In the three remaining Districts, to wit: The Greensborough, the Tarboro and the Wilmington, true Southern and anti-Holden men will be elected beyond a doubt. So, on this count, we may reckon, that at the worst, one-half of the delegation from North Carolina in the next House of Representatives will be true men. Is it not a burning shame that there is a doubt that all will be true men?

The following telegrams give the latest returns:

RALEIGH, Thursday, Nov. 5.

TURNER'S majority over ARRINGTON in Wake and Orange Counties, 1,445. TURNER'S election thought certain.

In the Third District, LEACH leads MCRAE in Johnson County about 300, and, including the army vote, is but little behind him in Wayne—result doubtful.

FULLER is thought to be elected over STRANGE and MEARES in the Fourth District.

Not enough returns received from other Districts to indicate the result. It is thought here that CHRISTIAN is elected over ASHE in the Seventh District.

RALEIGH, Thursday, Nov. 5.

RAMSAY leads LANDER about 700 in the Eighth District, with Union, Cleaveland and Catawba Counties to hear from. RAMSAY is probably elected.

WILMINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 5.

SMITH is probably elected in the First District; BRIDGERS in the Second; Third, doubtful; FULLER probably elected in the Fourth; Fifth, very doubtful; Sixth, GILMER probably elected; Seventh, too little known to judge; Eighth, LANDER elected; Ninth and Tenth not heard from.

FIGHTING NEAR ASHEVILLE.

The Asheville News contains an account of the recent fights at Warm Springs, thirty six miles west of Asheville. The first conflict took place between a small body of our cavalry and four or five hundred of the enemy. Our forces were so greatly outnumbered that they were obliged to fall back. Maj. WOODFIN, as heretofore stated, was killed, and four of his command wounded. The enemy was posted in the large brick hotel at the Springs—a strong position. The News says:

Another fight took place near the Warm Springs two or three days since, between a portion of the Twenty fifth North Carolina regiment, under command of Lieut.-Col. SAMUEL J. BRYSON, and a large force of the enemy. They outnumbered our boys very largely, and after a stubborn fight Col. BRYSON fell back. We had six men killed—Lieut. HYATT and others whose names we have not learned. Lieut. HYATT was an excellent officer, and a gallant and worthy man. Six were missing, but it was confidently hoped they would come in. The loss of the enemy was reported to be heavy.

P. S.—Since the foregoing was put in type we have received some additional particulars. The following is a list of the killed: Lieut. Hyatt, Sergt. Collins, Monroe Haskins, J. H. Townsend, J. Dodgins, —— Williams. Wounded—West.

The soldiers speak in the highest terms of the gallantry of Col. BRYSON.

We have a rumor that the enemy, 7 000 strong, were advancing on Asheville in two columns, and that Gen. VANCE had called for reinforcements.

MISSISSIPPI.

A dispatch dated Columbus, Miss., Nov. 3, says:

"The Governor's message was read to day. He opens with a review of the enemy's encroachments upon the State and the damage done public and private property. He urges the construction of a temporary penitentiary and the reestablishment of the deaf, dumb and blind asylum, broken up by the enemy, at Jackson. He advocates the removal of negroes from exposed districts, and suggests that they be put in the employ of the Government; and also advises that steps be taken to provide for the widows, wives and children of soldiers.

He alludes to the good done by the State troops, and favors a thorough organization of the militia, calling out all male citizens between sixteen and sixty years of age. He does not think it necessary to retain the office of Brigadier-General of militia, but desires the amplest preparation to be made, regardless of expense or extreme measures.

Hon. JAMES DRAKE was elected President of the Senate to-day."

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR.—We learn that a hostile meeting took place on Wednesday afternoon at the Sand Bar Ferry, on Carolina shore, between Mr. C. A. REID, of this city, and Mr. RICHARD COFFLAND, of Maryland—resulting in the death of the latter. The parties fought with COLT'S repeaters, to fire at the word, and to advance and fire at will after the first shot. Neither of the party, however, availed themselves of this privilege, but each kept his original position. COFFLAND was struck at REID'S second fire—the ball entering the body at the upper end of the breast bone, and passing out under the left arm. We are told that it was a fair stand-up fight, both parties evincing great coolness. Mr. C. fired two shots and exploded one cap after being struck. He expired in a few minutes after he fell. Mr. REID'S first ball passed through his opponent's hat. We do not know the origin of the difficulty. There was about seventy-five spectators of the scene.—Augusta Sentinel.

THE ADMINISTRATION AND THE WAR.

The Duty of Supporting the Government---Arbitrary Arrests---Object of the War to Save the Union---The Question of Reconstruction.

Speech of Hon. H. J. Raymond, of New-York, at Wilmington, Delaware, November 6, 1863.

From the Delaware State Journal.

A very large meeting of the citizens of Wilmington was held at the City Hall on the evening of Friday, Nov. 6, which was addressed by Messrs. H. J. RAYMOND, of New-York, and BUTLER G. NOBLE, of Wisconsin. Mr. RAYMOND'S remarks were substantially as follows:

Mr. PRESIDENT: I am very glad to avail myself of the invitation which brings me here to-night, and which enables me to take part with you, Citizens of our Common Country, in an election which is to have an important influence on its welfare and its destiny. It is the first time in my life that I have ever attempted to make a political speech in a Slave State. I have always believed, and have always acted on the belief, that Slavery, as it has existed in some of the States of this Union, was primarily and mainly a local affair, and that it belonged to the people of the States in which it existed to take such steps in regard to its removal as their own conviction of justice and of public policy might dictate. I have, therefore, in all that I have done during my connection with public affairs, which has been neither very long nor very important, confined my action on this subject to those aspects of Slavery which touched the general welfare—which affected the rights, the interests and the destiny of the country at large. I have believed, for many years, in common with a very large portion of the American people, that Slavery was endeavoring to usurp, and to a very great extent had usurped, a degree of control over the National Government far greater than it was entitled to exercise under the Constitution of the United States. I had seen slaveholders filling the Presidency for forty-nine out of the seventy years during which the Government had existed, and dictating the conduct of that high office for thirteen more. I had seen the slaveholding interest, as a distinct interest of the country, not only different from, but hostile to all its other great interests, controlling, with absolute and intolerant sway, the army and navy of the United States, the distribution of public patronage in all departments of the Government, proscribing every man in every section of the country who held Slavery to be an evil, influencing the legislation of Congress, dictating or overruling the decisions of the Supreme Court, depraving the organization and action of political parties and aiming through their action to make Slavery, as a political power, permanent and perpetual in the Government of the United States. I had seen it grasping at complete control of the Territories of the United States, for the sake of making them the basis of new extensions of its political power. All these things it had achieved, or was aiming to accomplish, while the slaveholding class constituted less than one-fiftieth part of the population of the United States, and while in every element of legitimate political influence Slavery was far inferior to other interests and other sections.

I believed, therefore, in common with a powerful and intelligent portion of the American people, that if the people themselves desired to retain control of their Government—if they desired that this nation should continue to be a Republic governed by the constitutional majority of the people—it was absolutely necessary to resist, by all just and constitutional modes of political action, these ambitious efforts of the oligarchy which rested on the ownership of slaves to obtain control of it, and to convert it into something very different in its nature and objects from what it was designed to be by those who won its independence and ordained its Constitution. [Applause.] I coöperated, therefore, very early and very zealously, with those who formed and organized the Republican party. That party came into existence for the purpose of checking and defeating this attempt of Slavery to consolidate and perpetuate its control over the General Government. Its active efforts have been devoted to that object and to that alone, and it has fulfilled its mission. [Applause.] Mainly, if not exclusively, through the action of that party—action provoked and rendered necessary by the ambition of Slavery itself—the progress of Slavery toward domination in this Republic has been ended forever. [Applause.] The election of a Republican President in 1860, was important in all its aspects and relations; but its paramount and supreme importance consisted in the demonstration it afforded, that the people of the United States had taken the Government into their own hands, and that the slaveholding aristocracy could hold it no longer. The demonstration of that fact provoked Slavery to a new and a final effort. It appealed from the ballot-box, where a President had been constitutionally elected, to the battle-field for the purpose of overthrowing his Government; and for two years and a half now the Government of the United States has been engaged in defending itself against this attempt. For two years and a half the energies of the people have been expended in a war for the preservation of the National existence. The war on the part of the United States is purely a war of defence; of defence against causeless and unprovoked aggression; of defence against an unholy attempt to overthrow the Democratic Republic of the United States; and that is certainly a cause worthy the utmost efforts and the last sacrifices of the bravest and the noblest people that ever lived on the face of the earth. [Great applause.] It is unnecessary for me to rehearse the history of this rebellion, its origin and cause, its progress or its prospects. It has been carried on by those engaged in it with a degree of vigor and obstinacy—I do not hesitate to add with a degree of courage and of self-sacrifice—which would have conferred lasting honor on men fighting in a better cause. The resources of the rebels, in men, in money and in all the materials of war, have proved to be far greater than we had expected to find them, and the war they have waged has been far more protracted, more destructive and more terrible than we supposed at the outset it could possibly prove. But the courage, the endurance and the patriotism of the American people have proved equal to the emergency. [Applause.] The Government for two years and a half has conducted this war with a degree of sagacity and a wise statesmanship to which impartial history will do justice, however partisan prejudice may obscure or ignore it; and the people of the United States have shown a steady patriotism, a high-toned devotion to the public good and an aptitude for military affairs unexampled in the history of nations. [Applause.]

We have reached a new stage in this great controversy. At the outset the people, on this as on every other important question, were more or less divided. There was a party in the North disposed to deny the right of the Government to fight for its own existence. Others denied the possibility of subduing the rebellion, while they conceded that it ought to be done. And some even espoused openly the cause of the rebels, as founded in justice and in right. Differences have also grown up during the progress of the war as to the proper mode of carrying it on, as to the fitness of particular men for special places, the policy or impolicy of specific action on the part of the Government, and indeed on all the details of the great transaction. But as we have seen more and more clearly the purpose and scope of the rebellion,—as its object and the results of its success have become more and more apparent, the people have made up their minds, with substantial unanimity, that whatever may be necessary shall be done to crush the rebellion and restore the authority of the Constitution of the United States. [Applause.]

There are two or three points which it seems to me are sufficiently established in the public mind to be taken for granted in this discussion:

1. The first is that the rebellion must be quelled,—that the Union must be restored,—that the supremacy of the Constitution must be reestablished over every foot of American soil. [Loud applause.] This is not a mere impulse of the vanity of the American people, as some foreign critics would fain believe; it is the deep and settled conviction of the American heart that unless this is done, the Republic of the United States is hopelessly destroyed, the peace, order and freedom of our people give place to turmoil, anarchy and confusion, and the last hope of rational civil liberty, resting on the right of self-government, perishes from off the face of the earth. [Applause.] Our fathers intended this Government to last forever and to be forever a free Government. They designed that it should secure to its citizens the full and complete enjoyment of civil liberty, and at the same time be powerful enough to maintain its position and its principles, if either should be assailed by any or by all of the nations of the earth. And for these two objects full provision was clearly and distinctly made in the Constitution which they ordained. The first was secured by retaining for each of the several States complete control of its own local affairs. The second was secured by creating a common Government for them all, which, within certain distinct and specified limits, embracing all great objects of common interest and concern, should be absolutely and entirely sovereign,—which should wield the force of the people, have authority over the whole, and represent the will and the purpose of the whole in all that involved the welfare of the whole; and with this sovereignty, thus defined and restricted, the States were expressly forbidden to interfere. The rebellion now in progress aims to overthrow this sovereignty of the nation, and to reclaim it for the several States. It aims, therefore, to destroy the nation itself—to wrest from it the national power and authority which it wields under the Constitution, and thus to destroy forever all our power and consideration among the nations of the earth. The people have determined that this must not, shall not be done. As the recent elections show, they have determined to sustain the Government—to crush the rebellion—to save the Union and restore the authority of the American Constitution. [Applause.] That point I consider settled.

2. There is a second point which seems to me equally clear and equally settled in the public mind, this namely,—that if the rebellion is to be quelled, it must be done by force of arms. [Loud applause.] Every thing that has occurred since the war began proves that this is so. We must surrender to the rebels or they must surrender to us. All talk and all thought of compromise,—of conciliation, of making any terms with the rebel authorities short of conceding what they claim, independence, is seen and felt to be utterly idle and hopeless. The language of all their public men proves it. The action of their leaders, civil and military, proves it. Everything that is said, and everything that is done, combine to confirm the declaration of the official organ of the Confederacy, the Richmond Enquirer, that "it is all or nothing: this Confederacy or the Yankee nation, one or other, goes down, down to perdition:—one or the other must forfeit its national existence and lie at the mercy of its mortal enemy." This is the alternative. Whether we wish it or not we must accept it. And the American people have declared their willingness to accept it—their readiness to meet the issue and to decide, by force of arms in the field of battle, which of the two it shall be—our Government or the rebel Government that is to go "down, down to perdition." [Applause.]

3. A third point which all concede to be equally clear is that this force by which alone the rebellion can be put down must be wielded solely and exclusively by the Government of the United States—by the Administration which has for the time being the sole and exclusive guidance of our national affairs. [Applause.] It is a national contest, and it must therefore be waged by national authority. No State can carry on this war—each State is expressly forbidden by the Constitution to make war at all. No confederation of States can do it—the States are expressly forbidden by the Constitution to enter into any confederation for any purpose whatever. No party can do it—no Convention or assemblage of men can do it. There is but one authority upon American soil that can rightfully or actually carry on this war, and that is the Government of the United States, no matter what man may be at the head of it, nor what political party may, for the time being, have charge of its affairs. [Applause.]

Now, these three points being conceded, does it not follow, with equal clearness and certainty, that the Government must be sustained by the people in carrying on this war, if the people desire the rebellion to be put down? No matter whether you approve all the acts of the Administration or not: no matter whether you helped bring it into power or not: no matter whether you think the members of it the best men for their places or not: for the time being they constitute the Government; they represent its authority and wield its force; and if you want this thing done you must aid them in their attempts to do it. [Applause.] We must overlook their mistakes. [Applause.] We must deal leniently with their errors. We must make large and liberal allowance for the extraordinary circumstances in which they are placed. And we must give them the cordial and earnest support which the magnitude of the cause and the welfare of the country demand. And when, by so doing, we have reëstablished the authority of the Government, and restored the integrity and the peace of the Union, we can rectify any abuses which may have crept into the Government, and redress any wrong which the Administration may have committed. [Loud applause.]

Now it seems to me that this simple statement of the case is quite sufficient to decide the duty of every American citizen. If the rebellion must be put down,—if this can only be done by force of arms,—and if that force can be wielded only by the Government of the United States, then it is clearly the duty of every true-hearted American so to speak, so to act and so to vote as to give the utmost possible support to the Government in its efforts so to wield that force as to crush the rebellion and restore the supremacy of the Constitution. [Applause.]

This, it seems to me, is all the affirmative argument that need be made upon this subject. How is it met by those who refuse thus to support the Government in its prosecution of the war?

The Government, it is alleged, is not carrying on the war for the purpose of putting down the rebellion at the South: it is doing it for the purpose of putting down free institutions at the North. It is doing it not to save the Union, but to abolish Slavery. It makes rebellion the pretext, and the armies of the Union the weapon, for overthrowing the Constitution and for establishing a military despotism upon its ruins. If I believed this to be true, I could not concur with those who assert it, in pretending to be for the prosecution of the war. Gov. SEYMOUR, of New-York, is one of those who profess to believe it—yet he has "dedicated" himself in words, repeatedly, to a vigorous prosecution of the war. A vigorous prosecution of a war to overthrow the Constitution and put down free institutions in the Northern States! Either these men are insincere in their professed belief, and are trying to mislead the public judgment by assertions which they do not believe themselves, or else their zeal for liberty is a hollow sham. If I believed that the free institutions of this country were in greater danger from the action of the Government than from the rebellion, I would take arms against the Government. I would fight the worst foe first. But I do not believe any such thing, and I find it difficult to feel any great respect for the judgments of those who do, and still more difficult to feel any respect at all for the honesty of those who assert it without believing it. Even if the Administration had transcended its powers, and committed serious wrongs in the prosecution of the war, I should be very slow in coming to the conclusion that it had done so with any purpose of subverting the liberties of the American people. There is no man living whom I would not quite as soon suspect of such a design as the present Executive of the United States. [Applause.] No man more upright—no man more patriotic, no man more thoroughly and entirely devoted to the great principles of American liberty as embodied in the Constitution of the United States, or less likely to do anything to their detriment, ever filled that exalted station than ABRAHAM LINCOLN. [Loud applause.] But I do not believe the conduct of the Administration is obnoxious to the censures that have been passed upon it. [Applause.] I do not believe that it has transcended its just constitutional authority. [Applause.] I do not believe that it has changed in the slightest degree the objects and purposes for which the war is waged—or that it has done anything in any respect for which full warrant may not be found in the provisions of the Constitution, or which cannot be fully justified by the emergencies of the case and the absolute necessities of the nation. [Loud applause.] And if you will permit me to trespass somewhat on your patience I will endeavor to vindicate this opinion.

THE MATTER OF ARBITRARY ARRESTS.

Foremost in this indictment of the Administration stands the charge that by its arbitrary arrests, without due process of law, on suspicion of intent to commit crime instead of on charges of crime already committed, and by its suspension of the writ of habeas corpus, which was intended to forbid and nullify all such arrests, the Government has actually abrogated the main guarantee of personal liberty provided by the Constitution, and subjected the rights, and the liberties of every citizen to the caprice of arbitrary power. Now it is quite true that one of the dearest and most sacred of the rights of every American citizen is this immunity from arbitrary arrest. The Constitution guarantees it, and without that guarantee the Constitution never could, and never should, have been adopted. And it is the very last right which any American should surrender. Nothing can be more dangerous to any society nothing more destructive to the personal freedom of its individual members, than the power of arrest and imprisonment on mere suspicion, without being compelled to submit to public judicial scrutiny the grounds on which such arrests are made. The ordinary rule of all free society—of our free society certainly—is, that no man can be arrested, arraigned or imprisoned except for the committal of some act which becomes a crime because it is in violation of some specific law. And whenever any man is arrested he has a right, on his own demand, to be taken before a Court that he may learn what act he is charged with having done what law it violates and on what evidence he is supposed to have done it. That is the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus; and the Constitution provides that "it shall not be suspended" except in a certain specified contingency. That exception was deemed necessary because the contingency was one likely to arise in the history of every nation.

Under ordinary circumstances the peace and security of society are sufficiently secured by the punishment of actual criminals for actual crimes. But emergencies may occur in which it is quite as important for the public safety to prevent intended crimes, and even to prevent intended acts which are not crimes because they do not violate any specific law, as to punish crimes which have actually been committed. Suppose, for example, that in a case of invasion some citizen is suspected of intending to hang up signal lights to guide an enemy's vessels into one of our ports;—or that, in case of a rebellion, some citizen is believed to be on the point of sending arms, munitions of war or information to the insurgents;—who can doubt that it is far more important for the public safety to prevent these intended acts, than it is to punish the men who do them after they have been committed? In the latter case the public will have sustained all the injury which the acts can inflict.

be left perfectly free to prosecute their work here in the heart of the Northern States? [Applause.] And is that a desire or a demand which can challenge the sympathies of any loyal man?

Upon grounds of the Constitution, therefore, it seems to me the action of the Administration in this matter is susceptible of the clearest and most complete vindication. It may be said, it is true, that this action has been unnecessary—that the public safety did not require it—and that one of the constitutional conditions of the rightful suspension of the writ is, therefore, wanting. But the only tribunal clothed with authority to decide that point has decided it otherwise. They may have been mistaken, but they were acting in their own right. They may have committed an error, but they have not violated the Constitution; and the error, if it be one, was on the side of the public safety, in the interest of the country, and therefore to be judged with leniency.

But if we may rely upon precedents in this matter, either English or American, they will show, I think, that even this censure is unjust. Our Government now has a much clearer justification for its action than can be found in most of the other cases. Take the case of England during the Irish Rebellion of 1848. Compared with ours that rebellion was a very paltry affair, and found neither aid nor advocates in any other part of the United Kingdom. Yet so great was the terror which it inspired, so serious in the eyes of the Government was the emergency which it created, that a bill passed both Houses of Parliament on two successive days—receiving in each a unanimous vote—authorizing the arrest of men in Ireland on mere suspicion, and depriving them of the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus. Every leading member of both Houses sustained it, and Lord BROUGHAM, who has since made himself conspicuous by his denunciations of the action of our Government, advocated its passage with an eloquence he has long since lost, and declared, with a just detestation of treason clothed in the robes of liberty,—"a friend of liberty I have lived and so shall I die; nor do I care how soon that event may come, if I can be a friend of liberty only by being a friend of traitors also." Unhappily for our country, there are many able and influential men among us who assume to be friends of liberty only that they may, with greater effect and with larger service, be friends of traitors and of treason also. [Applause.]

And now, without any further reference to English history, let me cite for you two precedents from our own. The first is drawn from the action of Gen. WASHINGTON and the Provincial Congress, in the early stages of our struggle for independence, toward the Loyalists or Tories of that day—"men who," in the language of Mr. GEORGE T. CURTIS, in his able and most excellent History of the Constitution of the United States, "from a sense of duty, or from cupidity, or from some motive, good or bad, made their election to adhere to the public enemy, and were, therefore, rightfully classed among the enemies of the country by those whose business it was to conduct its affairs and fight its battles." "Gen. WASHINGTON," says the same authority, (who is now, let me add, one of the most vehement assailants of the Government on this very point,) "was at a very early period of opinion that the most decisive steps ought to be taken with these persons." And in November, 1775, he sent an officer into New-Hampshire to seize every officer of the royal Government who had "given proofs of an unfriendly disposition to the American cause." In January of the next year, Gen. WASHINGTON gave Gen. LEE authority to march into Long Island, and disarm, and, if necessary, arrest all persons "whose conduct and declarations had rendered them justly suspected of designs unfriendly to the views of Congress." Suppose every man were to be arrested now whose conduct and declarations had rendered him suspected of "designs unfriendly to the views of Congress!" In Queens County, on Long Island, a majority of the inhabitants had refused to elect delegates to the Provincial Convention,—and for this offence, and for this only, nineteen of them had been arrested, taken to Philadelphia and put in prison. And the Provincial Congress, then in session, at once passed resolutions declaring that "those who refuse to defend their country should be excluded from its protection and prevented from doing it an injury;"—declaring all the men in Queens County who voted against electing delegates to be out of the protection of the Government, and liable to arrest and imprisonment for three months if found outside their county,—and also declaring that "any lawyer or attorney who should commence, prosecute or defend any action at law, for any inhabitant of Queens County who voted against sending deputies to the Convention, should be treated as an enemy to the American cause." [Applause.] This was the action of Gen. WASHINGTON—never considered in his day especially hostile to public liberty—in a case infinitely less imperative than those which have required the action of our present Government. His arrests were quite as arbitrary as any which President LINCOLN has made, and the emergency which required them was far less pressing. And the Provincial Congress, the bulwark and champion of liberty all through the war of independence, indorsed his acts, and laid down the broadest principles of public action upon the subject. This is one precedent from our own history.

You will find another in the case of our last war (the last thus far,) with Great Britain. Gen. JACKSON, who, in his day passed for an orthodox Democrat, though I have no idea he would do so now, [laughter and applause,] was in command of the City of New-Orleans when news arrived that peace had been concluded. As no official report to this effect had reached him, he still maintained martial law in the city. This gave rise to warm censures in the Louisiana Courier, a newspaper edited by Mr. LOUALLIER, who denounced his action as unjust and tyrannical. Gen. JACKSON did not stop to argue the question, but arrested Mr. LOUALLIER and put him in prison. [Laughter.] Mr. LOUALLIER applied, through a lawyer named MORELL, to a Judge named HALL, for the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus. Judge HALL issued the writ, but instead of obeying it, Gen. JACKSON arrested lawyer MORELL and Judge HALL, and put them in prison also [Laughter.] Another editor, by the name of HOLLANDER, incidentally spoke of this as a "dirty trick," whereupon Gen. JACKSON arrested Mr. HOLLANDER, and put him in prison with the other three. [Renewed laughter and applause.] That was then the Democratic method, according to Gen. JACKSON, of dealing with enemies of their country—when, in cases of invasion, the public safety required it. Three days afterward, official news of the conclusion of peace arrived, and the four prisoners were released. Judge HALL summoned Gen. JACKSON into Court, and fined him a thousand dollars for his arbitrary arrest. Gen. JACKSON paid it, and was carried, in the triumph of a popular whirlwind, to his lodgings. Thirty years afterward a bill was introduced and passed in Congress, refunding to Gen. JACKSON the thousand dollars he had paid as the penalty for his patriotic conduct,—and it received the support of the great body, if not of every member, of the Democratic party in both Houses of Congress—STEPHEN A. DOUGLAS, whom some of you may remember as a Democrat, taking the lead. [Applause.] It was then considered Democratic to sustain the country in time of war,—and it was not considered either Democratic or patriotic to go against it. How it is now-a-days, I leave those who still call themselves Democrats to judge. [Applause.]

Now, here are two precedents from our own history, showing under what circumstances and on what grounds arbitrary arrests have been made hitherto. Let me cite to you now the most conspicuous of the instances of such arrests in the present war, and see whether President LINCOLN has gone further in this direction than did Gen. WASHINGTON and Gen. JACKSON. A member of Congress from Ohio—then named VALLANDIGHAM, you may have heard of him, (what his name is since the late election I scarcely know, as I seldom hear his friends pronounce it,) [laughter,] went back to his State, boasting, and with truth, that he had never given a vote nor a dollar to aid the war against the rebellion,—and there commenced a popular agitation against the Government. He made speeches, the direct purpose and tendency of which was to prevent enlistments, promote desertions, excite hostility to the Government, and to cripple it in its prosecution of the war. He did all this in the heart of the State of Ohio. Now Ohio happened to be a military department under command of Gen. BURNSIDE, [applause,] who had declared his purpose to sustain the Government, and to arrest any man who should resist it. Upon this principle he arrested Mr. VALLANDIGHAM and put him in prison. Mr. VALLANDIGHAM applied to Judge LEAVITT, a Democratic Judge, through Senator PUGH, a Democratic lawyer, for the benefit of the writ of habeas corpus. The privilege of that writ had not then been suspended in the State of Ohio. Judge LEAVITT heard the case with the utmost patience—how much it required you may infer from the fact that he listened to Senator PUGH for over two hours. He was a Democrat, but not of the modern school, as he had been appointed to office by Gen. JACKSON, and inherited some of his notions of patriotism and public duty. And he decided that the public safety, in his judgment, required the arrest and imprisonment of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM, and that he should not, therefore, issue the writ. [Applause.] Mr. VALLANDIGHAM was tried by a military commission, convicted and sentenced to imprisonment for a term of years; but President LINCOLN, with his usual clemency, commuted his sentence to banishment among his Southern friends. [Laughter.] Mr. VALLANDIGHAM's friends took an appeal from the decision of the Government authorities in this matter, to the people of Ohio, Pennsylvania, New-York and other States. The case has been ably and zealously argued in them all, and unless we have been sadly misinformed, every State in which an election has been held has affirmed the justice of the original verdict, and prolonged the absence of Mr. VALLANDIGHAM from the loyal State of which he was not elected Governor! [Applause.]

I think now I have said enough on the subject of arbitrary arrests. I have endeavored to show that the action of the Government has not been in violation of the Constitution, and that it is fully justified by historical precedent. True it may deprive individuals for a time of their ordinary rights and privileges, but this is one of the sacrifices which war requires. We must not expect all the blessings and securities of peace in a time of war. War always demands sacrifices of money, of time, of comfort, of life itself: why should we expect to hold all civil rights untouched, while everything else we have is subject to its remorseless and destructive tread? That man must be a poor patriot who, when his country is in danger, will not submit to a temporary surrender of some of his rights for its salvation. Thousands and hundreds of thousands of our fellow-citizens have waived all their civil rights, and are exposing their lives on the field of battle in defence of that Constitution which affords the only basis and guarantee of our civil liberties: are we not equal to the infinitely smaller sacrifice required at our hands? The sole object of this temporary surrender of our privileges and immunities, moreover, is to secure them permanently to ourselves and our posterity. If the Constitution perishes, all these immunities perish with it. If that is saved, they are guaranteed to us forever.

But the Government, it is said, is now in the hands of the army, and that army is used, and will be used to deprive us of our freedom, and sustain the despotism established in its stead. Do those who urge this reflect that the army is simply the people, with arms in their hands—that they are drawn from the bosom of our society, and will soon return to it again, having precisely the same rights to be preserved, the same interests to be promoted as all the rest of us? Are they likely to aid in the destruction of their own liberties,—the overthrow of their own hopes,—merely to gratify the ambition of the President of the United States? Besides, who that knows ABRAHAM LINCOLN, or has read anything of his character and history, believes for one moment that he ever cherished a thought of permanently abridging in the slightest degree, or of in any way impairing the rights and liberties of the American people? [Loud applause and three cheers for President LINCOLN.] Those cheers are well deserved. No man has ever commended himself by his words and his acts more steadily or more thoroughly to the confidence of the country he is seeking to serve and to save than he. [Applause.]

THE CHARGE THAT THE WAR IS WAGED NOT FOR THE UNION BUT FOR THE ABOLITION OF SLAVERY.

I come now to another charge against the Administration brought by its opponents as a reason for not sustaining it in the prosecution of the war. It is alleged that the object of the war has been changed—that it is no longer carried on to restore the Union and maintain the authority of the Constitution, but to emancipate the slaves—that it is not now a war for the preservation of the Union but a war for the abolition of Slavery. If I believed that allegation to be true, I should sympathize with those who on the strength of it refuse to sustain the Administration. I do not believe the Government has any right to wage war against the South for the abolition of Slavery; and even if it had the right I should doubt the wisdom of its exercise. But I do not believe the assertion. The object of the war, in my judgment, is now precisely what it was when the war commenced. The purpose of the Government in carrying it on—the sole object which the Government seeks to accomplish by its means, because it cannot accomplish it by any other, is in my opinion now, as it has been from the beginning, the salvation of the Union, and not the abolition of Slavery. And this, I think, can be made perfectly clear to any candid man.

Those who insist that the object of the war has been changed are in the habit of sustaining that assertion by quoting a great variety of individual opinions. They quote this orator and that Editor, now a Senator, and next a member of Congress, to prove that the abolition of Slavery is the great end for which the war is carried on. Now one would naturally suppose that the proper and the only conclusive witness as to the object of the war was the recognized authority by which the war is carried on. It is for the Government of the United States, and for it alone, to decide and declare what end it seeks, what purpose it aims to accomplish by the prosecution of the war. Now we have from both departments of the Government, the Executive and the Legislature, the most explicit declarations on this very point. At the very commencement of the war Congress passed a resolution declaring that

"This war is not waged in any spirit of oppression, or for any purpose of conquest or subjugation, or of overthrowing or interfering with the rights or established institutions of the Southern States,—but to defend and maintain the supremacy of the Constitution and to preserve the Union with all the dignity, equality and rights of the several States unimpaired,—and that as soon as these objects are accomplished the war ought to cease."

This was the clear statement of the object and purpose of the war made by Congress at its commencement: and nothing has since been said or done by that department of the Government to indicate that this object has been changed. The President has been equally consistent and even more explicit in proclaiming the same thing. In his Inaugural Address,—in every message to Congress,—in his correspondence through the State Department with foreign Powers, in his letters to individuals and conventions, in all he has written, said or done since the war began, he has declared its object and purpose to be to save the Union,—precisely that and nothing more. Without going any further back let me read to you from his letter of Aug. 22, 1862, to Mr. GREELEY, one or two sentences, which are so clear and so precise in terms that their meaning cannot be mistaken. He says:

"As to the policy I 'seem to be pursuing,' as you say, I have not meant to leave any one in doubt. I would save the Union. I would save it in the shortest way under the Constitution.

If there be those who would not save the Union unless they could at the same time save Slavery, I do not agree with them.

If there be those who would not save the Union unless they could at the same time destroy Slavery, I do not agree with them.

My paramount object is to save the Union, and not either to save or destroy Slavery.

If I could save the Union without freeing any slave, I would do it—if I could save it by freeing all the slaves, I would do it—and if I could do it by freeing some and leaving others alone, I would also do that.

What I do about Slavery and the colored race, I do because I believe it helps to save this Union, and what I forbear, I forbear because I do not believe it would help to save the Union.

I shall do less whenever I shall believe what I am doing hurts the cause, and I shall do more whenever I believe doing more will help the cause."

Can anything be more precise, more definite or more conclusive than this? Does it not show beyond the shadow of a doubt that President LINCOLN's object and purpose in carrying on this war is, not to abolish Slavery, but to save the Union?

A VOICE—But we in Delaware want Slavery abolished.

Mr. RAYMOND—All right, my friend. I am glad to hear it. I trust you will get it abolished. No greater benefit, in my judgment, could possibly be conferred on the State of Delaware than the abolition of Slavery. But what I want you to understand is that you must abolish it yourselves and not ask or expect the General Government to do it for you. [Applause, and cries of "That's it," "We'll do it," &c.] It is for your interest that it should be done, and it is your right and your duty to do it. The General Government has no right to do it. Its duties and its sovereignty relate solely to interests which are national in their character, as Slavery most certainly is not. And while I rejoice most heartily at the new era which is dawning upon us, when the people of the Slave States can and will take up for themselves this great question of Slavery, and act upon it as their own judgments and consciences may dictate,—and while I most earnestly and devoutly trust that not only Delaware and Maryland, and Missouri and Tennessee, but every other Slave State, will clear itself from the stain and the blight of Slavery, just as soon as the rebel armies shall be driven from its soil, and the people shall be thus emancipated in their political action from the tyranny which has oppressed them so long, I desire it to be understood, most clearly and distinctly, that they must carry out this great reform themselves, and not look to the General Government to do it for them. [Loud applause.] That this grand and glorious consummation will be reached, I have not the slightest doubt. That the day will speedily come when there will not be a slave on American soil,—when the law of freedom shall be the law of every State, as it is the law for the whole Union, and when the pervading spirit of all our laws, local as well as National, shall be the spirit of liberty, and of equal rights for every human being, high or low, rich or poor, strong or weak, white or black, I believe with full and assured faith, and I thank God that its glorious dawning streaks the rejoicing heavens even now. [Loud applause.] But I want the people of the Slave States to work out for themselves this great salvation. [Applause.] I want them to catch the spirit of this great reform,—to feel that it is their work, their duty, their destiny to redeem themselves,—and that it is not something to be imposed upon them by foreign or superior power. [Applause.] And my special point now is to show you that this war, in which the whole nation is now engaged,—which is taxing so severely the energies, the resources, the wisdom and the courage of the whole nation,—is carried on, not for any local or limited object,—not for any State or for any sectional purpose, but solely and exclusively to save the Union and restore the supremacy of the Constitution over every foot of the Union's soil. [Loud applause.]

And now permit me to say, in a single word and by way of apology for dwelling so long upon points that may seem too clear for argument to the most of those who hear me, that in my political addresses I always speak on the assumption that every one of my audience is a political opponent and that my business is so to present my case as to convert him, by fair argument and just appeal, to my view of it. I have no object and no interest in addressing those who already agree with me. I talk not to please the righteous, but to call political sinners to repentance. [Laughter and applause.] I beg those political sinners, therefore, who may hear me now, (and I trust there are a good many of them here,) to understand that the object of this National war is now precisely what it was at the beginning—the salvation of the Union and not the abolition of Slavery. It is that fact which gives it so strong a hold on the conscience of the country. It is the conviction of that fact which has just led the people of the whole country, in the elections which have just been held, to pledge their hearty support to the Government in its prosecution. The destruction of Slavery may, and in all human probability will, be accomplished in the progress of the war and through its agency. If the war continues, if the rebels persist in their rebellion, and compel the National Government to send its armies into all the Slave States, and thus bring the whole territorial area of the rebellion under the practical workings of the Emancipation Proclamation, that great edict will take direct effect as a war measure upon every foot of the rebel territory, and free every slave on American soil. [Loud applause.] Already the armies of the Union, in waging war against the rebellion, have made the question of Abolition a practical question of local politics—of home concern—in Missouri, in Tennessee, in Maryland and in Delaware, each one of which States will, beyond all doubt, sweep Slavery from their statute-books within a year. This sets free more than half a million slaves. [Applause.] Our armies, moreover, in the unquestioned and unquestionable exercise of the rights of war now dominate the institution of Slavery in Louisiana, in Arkansas, in Mississippi, and in parts of North Carolina and Florida—which have at least a million more. Slavery thus holds a position of comparative security only in Texas, Alabama, Georgia, and parts of Florida, the Carolinas and Virginia; and our armies now hover on the borders of each of those States, and, if Providence prospers our arms, will speedily march into the very heart of the only region where Slavery finds a tottering and precarious foothold. [Applause.] And if Slavery thus falls, if it is thus crushed under the blows of the war which it began,—who will bewail its fate or shed tears on the felon grave which it dug for the Union, but in which it will find for itself an inglorious but undisturbed repose? [Applause.]

Meantime, let it be distinctly understood that the war is waged, not for the accomplishment of this result, but to save the Union; and when that object shall have been accomplished the war will stop. We have President LINCOLN's declaration to that effect in the passage I have already quoted from his letter. You have it in the resolution passed by Congress at the very outset of the war. You have it in the President's letter to the Springfield Convention. You have it in repeated dispatches sent by our Government to our Ministers abroad. All these render perfectly preposterous the plea of those who refuse to support the Government because the war is no longer waged to save the Union, but to free the negroes. President LINCOLN, in his Springfield letter, gives a clear and perfectly conclusive reply to all such pretences. "You say," he tells them, "you will not fight to save the negroes; fight you then exclusively to save the Union; whenever you shall have conquered all resistance to the Union, if I shall urge you to continue fighting, it will be an apt time then for you to declare you will not fight to free negroes." But these men insist on stopping the war before the Union is saved, for fear it will not stop then. [Laughter.] The Union is not yet saved. The armies of the rebels still hold the field. Until they are conquered we can have no hope of peace that shall bring with it a restored Union and a reestablished Constitution. Let us all unite to prosecute the war until that result is reached, and then we shall all unite to demand its close. [Applause.]

THE QUESTION OF RECONSTRUCTION.

But very many persons are checked in their inclination to support the war by distrust as to its practical result. Even in case of victory, they say, How do you propose to restore the Union? Suppose the rebellion crushed, how will you bring back the people of the Southern States to their allegiance? How do you propose to govern their territory,—to put their State Governments again in motion, and reconstruct the Union? These doubts and questionings disturb the judgments and affect the action of many very sincere and patriotic men,—and this effect has been increased by the heated and untimely discussions of the subject in which many prominent public men have seen fit to engage. The question of reconstruction cannot become a practical question until the rebellion is conquered. Until then we have nothing to reconstruct. I cannot help thinking, therefore, that it would have been wiser in these gentlemen, and quite as patriotic, to lend all their energies to the duty that lies most immediately and most distinctly before them, the vigorous prosecution of the war. They would have served the country quite as well if they had appealed to those great principles, those high aims, those noble and inspiring sentiments of love of country, love of Union and love of the Constitution which all the people share in common, and thus sought to enlist them all in this great work of common duty and of common glory—instead of springing technical discussions on abstract points sure to divide public sentiment, and, therefore, sure to check and cripple that common effort which the salvation of the country requires. But as the discussion has been started it will be pursued. And all we have to do is to keep it as clear from passion and prejudice as possible, to prevent it from degenerating into an exasperating party wrangle, and to let common sense have as fair play and as much influence as can be expected for it in heated political debates.

It has been urged, with ability and force, in some quarters that the rebel States, by seceding from the Union, have committed suicide,—that their existence as States can no longer be recognized by the General Government, which, nevertheless, has jurisdiction of their soil, and can create upon it new local, territorial governments, in its own discretion:—and that these governments thus created can become States only by permission of Congress, and enter the Union only on such conditions as Congress may prescribe. This theory has zealous advocates, and will have a party to support it in Congress and the country—a party held together not so much by any intellectual conviction of the soundness of the theory itself, as by the determination to use it as a basis for insisting that no rebel State shall come back into the Union except on condition of its abolishing Slavery in its State Constitution. The end aimed at may be desirable. I think it is,—that is, I think it highly important, to their own welfare and for the interest of the whole country, that the States of the Union should all be free, and that Slavery, which has been the cause of this rebellion, should never have power to foment another. But no wise man will permit his wishes on one point to control his actions on all. Still less will he adopt an elaborate theory of constitutional law, in a matter affecting the permanent welfare of the nation, and deciding for all time to come the character of our institutions, for the sake of accomplishing any one purpose, even if that be so important a purpose as the abolition of Slavery.

For my own part I do not find any support for this theory in the Constitution, or in what must be hereafter as it has been heretofore the constitutional relation of the several States to the American Union. It must be borne in mind that the Constitution has almost nothing to do with States as such. It imposes no affirmative obligation upon them. It does not depend upon them for the execution of its laws. It deals directly and exclusively with individuals. It makes a law, and it requires every individual within the scope of its authority to obey that law. That law is the supreme law of the land, "anything in the constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding." It is this feature, which, more than any other, distinguishes the Constitution from the old Articles of Confederation. Under them the Congress made laws for States to execute. It called on the States for money, for men, for support of all kinds,—and the States could give or refuse—could execute or annul the laws of Congress at their sovereign pleasure. This was the weakness of that Government. It was this feature which made it necessary to form a more perfect Union," and that was done by ordaining the present Constitution, which directs its laws to every individual citizen, and requires his obedience, no matter in what State he lives or what that State may say about it. It recognizes the States in this connection, as in every other, only to forbid their interference with its sovereignty within the defined limits of its own jurisdiction. When a State, therefore, comes into the Union, every individual inhabitant of that State becomes subject to the Government of the United States. It becomes his duty to obey its laws, and no State can release him from that duty. If he refuses and resists he commits a crime against the Government of the United States, and no State can release him from his individual responsibility for that crime or from its punishment. No State can, therefore, possibly take any one of its citizens out from the jurisdiction of the National Government:—still less can it take them all out. In other words, no State can possibly secede. No individual in any State can sever his connection with the National Government,—or absolve himself from the obligation to obey its laws—nor can all the citizens of any State, acting as individuals, as a State Government, in convention, or in any other form, release themselves, or release anybody else, from the supreme obligation which rests upon them to obey the laws of the United States. Whatever individuals may do toward that end, is a crime. Whatever States may do, is a nullity. States, as such, cannot commit crimes. A crime is a violation of some positive obligation. The Constitution does not impose positive obligations upon States, but only upon their individual citizens. It is, therefore, the individual citizens of a State, and not the State as such, that is to be punished for crimes committed against the United States. The State of South Carolina cannot be hung for treason, though every individual living in South Carolina may—and perhaps ought to be. [Laughter.] In its dealings with this rebellion, therefore, as in everything else, the Government deals exclusively with individuals, and not at all with States. Our armies are arrayed against the rebels, not against rebel States. When we come to inflict punishments for the crimes of the rebellion, we shall inflict them upon the individuals who have committed them, and not upon the States in which they live. One of the penalties of treason is disfranchisement; but that is a penalty to be inflicted, like all others, upon individual criminals, and not upon aggregates, or communities or States. A State cannot be disfranchised any more than it can be hung, as a State, and in punishment of crime. For other reasons and on other grounds the Constitution has conferred upon each House of Congress the right to judge of the qualifications of its own members:—and Congress may, therefore, exclude members from any rebel State, and may thus disfranchise that State in its discretion: but this is not designed as a provision for punishing crime but as a just deference to the dignity of Congress, and as a necessary precaution against abuses. Nor would such exclusion and disfranchisement imply that the State was no longer in the Union. If the citizens of any State are bound to obey the laws of the Union, that State is in the Union. That obligation is the just, constitutional test. Now will any man contend that the citizens of South Carolina, or any one of them, have been released, by their own act, by the act of that State, or in any other way, from their supreme obligation to obey all laws of the United States made in pursuance of the Constitution thereof? Certainly not. Then how can any man contend that South Carolina is not, in the eye of the Constitution, just as much in the Union as she ever was?

It is common to hear it said that the rebels, and all the rebel States, are "alien enemies," and must be treated as such. But if they are aliens, they owe us no allegiance—they are under no obligation to obey our laws, and we have no right to make war upon them for the purpose of compelling their obedience. Yet all concede that the object of the war is precisely that and nothing more, and that it will end when, and only when, they return to their allegiance. The whole war thus proceeds on the assumption that these men still rest under a supreme obligation of allegiance to the Constitution of the United States—that nothing has happened to release them from that obligation—that nothing which they or their States can do can possibly effect that release—and that until their independence, as a distinct and separate nation, is achieved and acknowledged, they will be bound to that allegiance. How, then, can they be regarded or treated as aliens in any sense? They are still citizens of the United States—offenders against its law, rebels against its authority, and therefore to be overcome in their rebellion, and to be punished for their crimes.

Now these are the reasons which lead me to discard wholly the theory of State suicide. No State has any power to take itself or any one of its citizens, from under the jurisdiction of the Government of the United States. Any act or ordinance which any State may pass for such a purpose is simply null and void. The obligation of obedience to the national law remains unimpaired—and with that obligation goes every right which the Constitution recognizes or confers. Every citizen of every State is entitled to-day to every civil right which he enjoyed before the rebellion broke out, unless he has forfeited it by some crime for which deprivation of his rights is the prescribed and acknowledged penalty; and in that case he can be restored to the enjoyment and exercise of his lost rights only by the remission of that penalty by the proper authority. But upon such remission he at once resumes them.

But, after all, I attach very little practical importance to these discussions. The great work of restoring the Union is not to be carried on upon such a basis. It is a practical work, in the hands of a practical people, and it will be prosecuted and perfected in a practical manner. Indeed, it is already going on, and is bringing about, from day to day, its practical results. Without waiting for the close of our metaphysical debates as to the proper mode of reconstructing the Union, the Union is rapidly taking the liberty of reconstructing itself. [Laughter and applause.] Societies, it must be remembered, are not mechanical contrivances—they are living organisms. They have a law of growth and a power of growth quite independent of our systems and of our schemes. They take shape and form from the vital principles, the essential sentiments, interests and impulses of their individual members, and this process we see is going on now in the rebel States every day. It has been said that even if we were to conquer the rebel States we could never convert their people into loyal citizens. But in spite of this plausible theory we see, as a matter of fact, that just as fast as the rebel armies are driven out of the rebel States the people of those States are not only willing but eager to return to their allegiance to the Constitution, and put themselves again under protection of the National flag. It has been so in Maryland—it has been so in Missouri, in Tennessee, in Lousiana, in Mississippi. And see now what has been already accomplished. Of the actual States originally claimed and held by the Confederacy, extending from Chesapeake Bay to the Rio Grande, and from the Missouri and Ohio to the Atlantic and the Gulf, we already occupy and hold more than half. In other words, half of the Confederacy, territorially regarded, is already reclaimed, and has been reconstructed into the Union:—and what has been done with that half may be easily done with the other. More than one half the white population of all the original rebel States are at this moment living under the national flag. They have been brought back to their allegiance by the power of the Union arms,—by the overthrow and defeat of the rebel forces, and by the consequent conviction in their minds that the rebel cause is lost, and that every consideration of their own welfare and that of their posterity requires them to abandon the rebellion and return to the Union. [Applause.] And if that has been accomplished with one-half the population of the rebel Confederacy, why, in the name of common sense, may it not also be done with the other? If one-half their people have discovered that the rebellion is a failure, a ruinous and disastrous mistake, why may not the other half make the same discovery?

Now in my opinion just as fast as any rebel State is cleared of the rebel armies and held by the Union forces, the people of that State will desire to resume their allegiance to the National Constitution. They will desire to elect members of Congress,—to reinstate their local Legislature and resume the exercise of all their rights and functions as citizens of a State under the Constitution of the United States. It will be the duty of the Government to hold by military authority possession and control of every rebel State until its people can act freely and without dictation in this matter, and until it is satisfied that a fair proportion, if not an absolute majority, of them, are disposed thus to act. Using its supreme authority, moreover, in the exercise of the war power, the Government will have a perfect right to require an oath of allegiance to the Federal Constitution as a condition of holding any State office or of voting for any officer, State or National. But I have no doubt that in every case where the people of a State may desire thus to resume their allegiance and their old relations to the Union, the Government will deal with them in the most liberal and tolerant manner. In Mr. SEWARD's letter to the French Government, declining its offer of mediation, he had the President's authority for saying that their seats in both Houses of Congress awaited the arrival of representatives from the rebel States whenever they might choose to send them; and in his letter to ex-Mayor WOOD, of New-York, President LINCOLN has declared that if the people of the rebel States should lay down their arms, and resume their allegiance to the Constitution, a general amnesty should not be withheld, if it were necessary to enable them to elect members of Congress. We have thus the most full and explicit assurance of the desire and determination of the Government to aid the people of the rebel States in resuming their old relations to the National authority, whenever they shall lay down their arms, and resume their allegiance to the Constitution. Now, suppose the initial steps in this direction to have been taken. Suppose the people of Louisiana, after proper evidence of their sincerity and unanimity, and upon compliance with such just conditions and precautions as the Government, in the exercise of the war power, may require, elect members of Congress, and send them to Washington. If they are admitted to their seats, that admission will settle the whole question of reconstruction so far as the State of Louisiana is concerned. And does any man doubt that they will be admitted? In spite of all the technical discussions of State rights and State suicide which are so fashionable—in spite of the earnest and universal desire that Slavery may be abolished—we shall see, in my judgment, an overwhelming verdict of the people in every Northern State, Massachusetts and Vermont not excepted, in favor of their admission. And the same thing will happen with every other rebel State as they may be successively cleared of the rebel troops, and may, one after another, seek to resume their old positions in the American Union. And thus, in my judgment, by a natural and regular process, slow possibly, but certainly sure in its operation, will the Union be restored and the supremacy of the Constitution reestablished over the whole of the National domain. [Applause.]

Now, I am quite aware of the objections and the cavils to which a reconstruction of the Union on such a basis and by such a process as this is exposed. I know that men who have party interests to serve or personal feelings to gratify,—men who have hobbies to ride or pet theories to establish; men who, with the best intentions in the world, think that the country can be saved only in their way and by their prescriptions, will regard this as altogether too prosaic a method of closing so grand and dramatic a chapter in the world's history as this rebellion,—as quite beneath the dignity of the occasion and wholly unsuited to the issues and opportunities of the age. But practical statesmanship, we must remember, is at best a prosaic affair—almost as prosaic as war itself. The popular idea of a great General is that of a handsome man, in splendid uniform, on a prancing charger, witching the world with noble horsemanship, and pointing out to his multitudinous troops the paths of glory and the grave. The reality would show us a care-worn man, descending to the minutest and humblest duties of the camp, living on the coarsest fare, exposed to the roughest weather, poring over maps and cross-examining spies and deserters by night, and beset with a thousand cares which an hour's untimely storm or the misconduct of a single regiment may convert into the most bitter disappointment and the most lasting blight of all his hopes. So is it in practical politics. Common sense outweighs the most brilliant theories, and while the world admires and glorifies the latter it lives and is governed by the former.

Let me glance for a moment at some of the objections urged against such a solution of the pending problem. It has been said, and by no less an authority than Major-Gen. BUTLER, that if we thus regard all the States as still in the Union we cannot elect a President, inasmuch as that requires a majority of all the electors. Gen. BUTLER is mistaken. If he will consult the language of the Constitution, he will find that it requires a majority only of "all the electors appointed," and if the rebel States do not appoint any electors, they will simply be left out of the reckoning altogether. If the election should go to the House, I admit, the result might be seriously affected, inasmuch as two-thirds of all the States are required for a quorum. But that contingency is not likely to occur, and the possibility of it ought not, certainly, to control our action on the general issue.

But, it is said, if we allow the States thus to come back, the rebels will regain their power. They are still Secessionists at heart, and will send again to Congress the same men who have brought this rebellion upon us. I do not think there is any danger of that result. I do not fear the reappearance in the National Councils of the authors of this rebellion. JOHN B. FLOYD will never return to the Cabinet: one reason why he will not is that he is dead, and the other reasons therefore need not be mentioned. [Laughter.] JEFFERSON DAVIS and Mr. MASON and ROBERT TOOMBS might possibly attempt to return to the Senate: but they have been guilty of treason, and before they could resume their seats they would have to go through the troublesome and slightly damaging process of being hung. [Laughter.] I do not mean to say that they would not be quite as fit for those seats after being hung as before. I think they would—but as the Senate is the judge of the qualifications of its own members, they might have prejudices on the subject and decline to admit them to their old fraternity. [Laughter and applause.] One great fact we must bear in mind in this connection. These men have been the political leaders of the Southern States. They have induced the Southern people to plunge into this rebellion. When it fails—when the great mass of the people in the Southern States find themselves utterly ruined in fortune and in social standing—when they find themselves saddled with an enormous debt, discredited in the eyes of the world and humiliated in their own—do you suppose they will be likely to intrust their political fortunes longer to the men who, by false promises and for their own ends, have brought all this ruin and degradation upon them? Their rule is at an end. Their political influence and leadership are gone forever. Political power in the South will pass into new hands—not of a class, but of the great body of the Southern people—of the men who live by their own labor, and not by the unpaid labor of slaves, and then we shall have a true Democracy—one that rests on equal rights—at the South as we have had in the Northern States. [Applause.] Beside this, we have no right to insist upon any such adjustment, any such peace, as will secure the triumph of any political party or any political opinions. We seek to restore the Union. We have a right to insist that none but loyal men—none but men who will swear allegiance to the Constitution of the United States, shall have part or lot in the conduct of its affairs; but further than that we cannot go. We cannot insist upon any party test. We cannot require adhesion to any party platform, or to any specific opinions on any subject of legislative action, as a test of loyalty and a condition of exercising political rights. We cannot refuse representation in Congress to any State or section, lest their representatives should vote wrong. We have a right to require that every member and every voter should be in all his action a loyal man—a man pledged by his oath to uphold and maintain the Constitution of the United States. Until he breaks that oath he must be deemed loyal. For all the rest,—for the character of the laws which Congress may enact and the votes which its members may give we must trust the intelligence and the wisdom of the people, working through the ordinary channels of political action.

But this process, it is alleged, may not rid us of Slavery. It is feared that Slavery may, in a Union thus restored, resume its old political influence, and plunge us again into the horrors of a civil war. The war, therefore, it is urged, should never end until the last vestige of Slavery has been destroyed. I concede the full force of this objection. I share wholly and thoroughly the feeling from which it springs. But I have one or two things to suggest in reply to it. Even if it were certain that this would be the result of closing the war now, I do not believe we have any right to wage it longer for its prevention. The war is just while it is a war to put down this rebellion: I doubt very much whether, when that has been accomplished, we should have any right to continue it for the purpose of preventing another. But, however that may be, I do not deem it necessary to do so, even for the accomplishment of that end. As I have already said, Slavery has already received its death-blow. Its power, as an element of national politics, is already completely destroyed. No political party at the North will ever find its interest in courting its support, and any party which may make the attempt will be swept from existence by the indignation of the Northern States. [Applause.]

But more than this:—it seems to me certain that Slavery must perish, not only as a political power, but as a social institution, under the blows which the war has already inflicted. The Proclamation of Emancipation, issued exclusively as a war measure, designed to weaken the military force of the rebellion and thus to aid the Union cause, has already worked the actual freedom of half a million slaves, and laid the foundation for the speedy enfranchisement of a million more. Let Gen. GRANT, after defeating BRAGG, push part of his army to Montgomery and Mobile, and the rest to Augusta in the rear of Savannah and of Charleston, and every remaining slave will be to all intents and purposes within our army lines, and thus set free,—and no slave thus made free can ever be returned to bondage again by any power, State or National, on the face of the earth. [Applause.]

But the war has produced another result which is still more important and is well worth reflection. Hitherto Slavery has been mainly a matter for agitation in the free States;—the war is making it a subject for practical action in the Slave States themselves. [Applause.] Just as fast as the rebel armies are driven out of the rebel States and the people are thus left free to canvas their local interests, the very first subject to which they turn their attention is that of Slavery—and the issue is no longer whether it shall be touched or not—whether a man shall be hung or roasted alive for talking about its abolition—but whether it shall be abolished instantly or allowed a few years of respite and of grace, that it may die more easily and with less disturbance of the public peace. [Applause.] Thus you see to-day that this is the great question which agitates and divides public sentiment in Missouri, in Kentucky, in Tennessee, in Maryland and in Delaware,—and so it will agitate and divide every Slave State, just as soon as it is delivered from the rebel power. Now that is precisely the state of things which I have long desired to see brought about. I have always thought that the Abolition party belonged in the Slave States, and had no business at the North. Abolitionism belongs where the thing to be abolished lives. [Applause.] And I am glad to see that it has at last taken root in its proper soil. It is for you in Delaware to abolish Slavery here, because it is for your interest, for your honor, for your prosperity that it should be abolished. [Applause and cries of "We'll do it."] I do not doubt it. I have full and entire faith in the judgment and the action of the people in every case and on every subject where they are allowed fair play. I believe that you in Delaware will abolish Slavery because I know that it is for your interest to do so, and because I know also that sooner or later you will find it

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 13.

Bets are made here to-night that Gen. MEADE will go into Winter quarters. From the front we hear that the enemy present a very strong front on the south bank of the Rapidan, and have recommenced picket-shooting. Yesterday a detachment of the First Vermont cavalry was fired on while going out on picket near the river, and all along between Summerville and Germania Fords our men on picket find it necessary to keep under cover or else be made targets of.

The water in the Rapidan is very low, and the river is fordable at many points. This makes the work of guarding it very arduous. It would not be surprising if the enemy some of these dark nights should make a dash across the river and within our lines, to create a diversion and incidentally gobble some careless command.

There are but few parties of rebels now on the left bank of the Rapidan. A small party was driven across yesterday by an inferior force. When our men reached the bank both infantry and artillery were exposed on the opposite side to resist what they thought was a reconnoissance in force, or a movement to cross; but no heavy guns opened on either side, and there was but little carbine firing.

The enemy have also resumed work with the spade. They are not satisfied with the defences thrown up last September, but are digging rifle-pits and throwing up earthworks and constructing curtains for every exposed point.

DISPATCH TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 13.

Information from the Army of the Potomac states that officers from the front report that a considerable body of rebels shelled KILPATRICK'S camp, near Stevensburgh, yesterday morning. It thus appears that some of the enemy are still on this side of the Rapidan.

There is a great scarcity of tobacco, and other necessary articles for the soldiers, in consequence of the extended prohibition against sutlers.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Winter—Gen. Meade Determined to Fight—Our late Captures—Southern Unionism.

NEAR BRANDY STATION, Tuesday, Nov. 10, 1863.

Seated upon a fallen log in front of a green wood fire, at the unseasonable hour of 5 o'clock, and surrounded by a dozen or more persons, like myself, vainly attempting to make ourselves comfortable by warming one side while the other is freezing, I attempt the task of dissing up the few incidents that have transpired since my letter of yesterday.

The chilly wintry blasts go moaning through the forest, where, encamped and surrounded as we are by horses and mules, whose restiveness even at this early hour but too plainly indicates that they have had nothing but oak leaves to eat for the last sixteen hours—the more unpleasant for them because of traveling fourteen miles within that time—the scene is dismal enough, indeed, and provocative of neither romance or sentiment.

To describe accurately the transactions of the last forty-eight hours, and the movements of this army, were it prudent to do so, would require the co-operation of at least a score of active, well-mounted reporters. Suffice it to say primarily, that the Commanding General is obeying orders implicitly, viz.: Endeavoring to force the army under Gen. Lee to give him battle. In so doing there have been during the last forty-eight hours marches to the right, marches to the left, marches to the front, and countermarches. At the close of the fights at Rappahannock Station and Kelly's Ford, Sunday evening, the enemy fell back, and when daylight dawned on Monday morning, not a gray-back could be seen. They had all mizzled—skedaddled. Monday at an early hour, the whole fighting force of the army moved across the Rappahannock without opposition. Gen. BUFORD'S cavalry division, on the extreme right, had a successful skirmish near Rixeyville, driving the enemy before him to the vicinity of Culpepper, killing a few, wounding more, and capturing between fifty and one hundred prisoners. Gen. KILPATRICK, in the opposite direction, had some skirmishing, but could bring on no general engagement. To-day the enemy's lines, it is reported, are in the vicinity of Culpepper. They must run or fight at an early moment, for this army will soon be in motion again.

The action at Rappahannock Station, Saturday night, is considered here the most perfect success ever gained by the Army of the Potomac—for it was a battle in which—thanks to Gen. RUSSELL and the brave troops participating—decided and practical results were obtained. It is to be hoped that the affair is ominous of the result of the next general engagement.

Two of the guns captured Sunday, were ten pound Parrotts, and the other two Napoleons—all in complete order, with caissons, &c. One of the Parrotts had written upon it—"Captured at Chancellorsville." The piece was taken from the First Virginia Artillery Regiment, Battery C. Some of the members of that battery when they saw the gun, recognized it at once, and fairly embraced it.

About seventeen hundred muskets were captured, most of them in serviceable condition. A large majority of these guns were of English manufacture, bearing the Tower stamp of 1861. The remainder of the guns bear the Richmond stamp, and there is abundant evidence in their appearance to indicate that the stamp is not a forgery.

Since writing the above information has been received that the enemy are crossing the Rapidan.

The headquarters of the army last night was in the same place occupied by Gen. LEE Sunday night. A letter taken from the body of a dead rebel will be sent forward, under official sanction, to-morrow, showing important facts in regard to the existence of loyal men in North Carolina.

The letter is from a father to his son in the rebel army—who died at Warrenton Junction from wounds received in the fight last Saturday at Rappahannock Station. He states the number of men actually resisting the Confederate Government in the district where he resides, and that there are with them 500 deserters from the rebel army. He advises his son to desert to the Union lines, and gives other deeply interesting information.

The Rebels over the Rapidan—Their Schemes Disturbed—Their late Camps—Lee's Policy.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Wednesday, Nov. 11, 1863.

Again has the noted leader of the enemy in Virginia been outgeneraled by the Commander of this army, and again the Rapidan River has become our front. The last remnant of the rebel army crossed that river on Sunday last, and their departure was somewhat accelerated by the approach upon their rear of the Third cavalry division. Sunday morning Gen. KILPATRICK, with his division, crossed the Rappahannock at Kelly's Ford, and toward the latter part of the day came upon the enemy's rear guard at Stevensburgh, and, after a brief fight, drove them across the Rapidan. Citizens residing in the vicinity state that the enemy's force engaged on this occasion was twice as large as KILPATRICK'S command, and that their falling back before such a force they do not hesitate to say was a most disgraceful affair. The loss on our side was trifling. We captured between forty and fifty prisoners.

That the enemy had made preparations to go into winter quarters, between the Rappahanock and Rapdan Rivers, now does not admit of a doubt. In every direction from Brandy Station, officers' and soldiers' cabins have recently been constructed in sufficient number to accomodate, at least, 10,000 men. The Stevensburg road is flanked for miles by them, and similar structures are to be found in almost every available point some complete and others yet unfinished. Their cabins are not the ordinary mud and wood hovels, but the sides of many of them are made of slabs and carefully roofed over with the same, or shingles made by hand. Nearly all of the officers' quarters have chimneys, from ten to fifteen feet in height, and carefully constructed with brick. All of the men's quarters which I have noticed completed, have chimneys, made by splicing logs upright and nicely lined with mud or mortar. Around these camps are to be found the usual debris upon the evacuation of such places; but it is a noticeable fact that there are about these camps a large number of cans which once contained preserved meats, fruits and vegetables, bearing the well-known labels of New-York and Baltimore dealers in such articles. In such profusion are these scattered about in some camps that one would suppose the rebel army was abundantly supplied with all of the necessaries and some of the luxuries of life; the fact unmistakably indicates that the contraband trade across the Potomac or somewhere else is in a flourishing condition now, or has been quite recently. From the fact that many little articles of convenience were left behind and ready for use—such as tables, chairs, tubs, &c.—it is supposed that the former occupants not only had prepared for a long sojourn, but were forced to leave somewhat hurriedly. The truth of the matter is, LEE was entirely surprised by the simultaneous attack made by Gen. MEADE on Saturday at Kelly's Ford and Rappahannock Station. The movement of Gen. KILPATRICK to Falmouth, week before last, caused him to believe that a movement was to be made upon Fredericksburgh, and a force was hurriedly sent there to defend that position. The force of the enemy between the Rappahannock and Rapidan thus depleted. Gen. MEADE moved forward, and now holds undisputed sway over the position. LEE did not hesitate to leave for Fredericksburgh with the bulk of his army, for he supposed that the force left at the railroad crossing and at Kelly's Ford would be able to hold these positions. The mistake was not discovered until too late to be remedied, and a precipitate flight across the Rapidan became a necessity.

From the Signal Station on Pony Mountain there could be seen last night across the Rapidan an immense number of camp fires—the present location of LEE's army. What the next move of this army is to be remains to be seen. All was quiet along the front yesterday and to-day.

The recent retrograde movement of LEE's army confirms what I have before stated—that the policy of the wily rebel General all the Fall campaign has been to avoid a general battle until great advantage of position could be obtained.

Yesterday for a few minutes the air was filled with snow-flakes, but not enough fell to whiten the plains, though the mountain tops within sight on either hand are covered with snow. While the days are comfortable, the nights are anything but comfortable.

The Situation on Thursday—Gen. Meade's Remarks — Our Army — Bushwhackers Scarce.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday, Nov. 12, 1863.

All was quiet on the Rapidan, and with the whole army yesterday, in fact, except a few changes of position by portions of the force. If the weather continues good, the prospects are that we shall not long remain in this position. The remarks of Gen. MEADE on Tuesday, in response to the speech of Col. UPTON upon presenting the flags recently captured from the enemy, has filled the whole army with hope, and he stands higher to-day in the estimation of the active men of the command than ever before. His assertion that he has more work for the army to do, is considered as indicating that a new policy has been adopted in the management of the Army of the Potomac, and that the enemy will not be permitted to longer hold us in check, even if they have a force equal to ours, without a fight—that the commander is determined the present campaign shall be fruitful in results. In all this it is possible I may be mistaken, but this is the feeling abroad in the army, and it will go far toward making the campaign a success. The men are all in fine spirits; the sanitary condition of the different corps is good; the men are well clothed, well fed, and well supplied with all the materials of war, and just now the men are enjoying the luxury of Winter quarters prepared to their hand by the rebels—a luxury fully appreciated these cold, frosty nights.

I see by JEB. STUART'S official report of the Buckland Mills fight, which a few days ago was published in the TIMES, that he there confirms my report that the enemy used against KILPATRICK'S cavalry a division of infantry. I call attention to this fact because the enemies of the Third division and the friends of HAMPTON, who are trying to depose STUART, have alleged that no infantry was used on that occasion—that it was wholly a cavalry fight, and that HAMPTON deserved the credit of defeating KILPATRICK.

Capt. L. C. ANDRESS, Co. H, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Pennsylvania Volunteers, lies mortally wounded at the house of Mr. STRINGFELLOW, near Brandy Station. While the Third corps was moving to the front last Sunday, for a few minutes it was under quite a heavy fire of shell. One shell struck Capt. ANDRESS in the right thigh, fracturing the bone to the hip joint. At the time he was using his sword as a walking-stick. The ball struck that first, carrying a piece of the blade three inches long through the clothing of Orderly-Sergt. RAPP, of the same regiment, and was found imbedded in a well-filled pocket-book—the book doubtless saving him from receiving a mortal wound. The shell must have exploded instantly upon hitting Capt. ANDRESS, for one piece shattered the left arm of Orderly-Sergt. RAPP, and inflicted several flesh wounds on his right leg. RAPP'S arm was amputated, and he is now at the house of Mr. STRINGFELLOW, doing well. A man named MCFARLAND, from Ellsworth Falls, Hancock Co., Me., belonging to the One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Pennsylvania, was killed on Sunday. His remains lie buried near the house of Mr. STRINGFELLOW.

For once there is a scarcity of bushwhackers and guerrillas within our lines. It would seem as though all armed rebels had been forced beyond the Rapidan and back of the Rappahannock. Small squads of men travel all about Culpepper within our lines, and hus far I have heard of no one being molested. The condition of things was far different a few weeks ago.

GEN. GRANT'S ARMY.

Longstreet Seriously Threatening Burnside—Burnside Able to Take Care of Himself—Official Reports from Gen. Grant and Gen. Burnside.

CHATTANOOGA, Thursday, Nov. 12.

Quiet in and around Chattanooga prevails.

Reliable intelligence from Gen. BRAGG'S army, up to 3 o'clock this morning is received, at which time 12 men deserted from the rebel picket posts and arrived within our lines fully armed and equipped.

The disaffection in the rebel army is no longer confined to the Kentucky and Tennessee troops, but is wide-spread among the troops from other States.

Our daily receipts of deserters from the rebel lines average from 12 to 14.

Gen. HARDEE is assigned to the command of Gen. POLK'S corps, and he has relieved Gen. LONGSTREET, who was stationed on Lookout Mountain.

Gen. LONGSTREET, with 16,000 troops, part of whom are cavalry, has gone to East Tennessee.

A considerable force of rebel cavalry has also gone to Iuka.

The rebel divisions of Genr. CHEATHAM and STEWART have returned to Gen. BRAGG'S army.

Gen. BRAGG has now three full corps with him, those of Gens. HARDEE, BRECKINRIDGE and BUCKNER.

Sixty thousand men is a low estimate of the number of men composing the army of Gen. BRAGG.

The report of an artillery duel between the Lookout and Moccasin Point batteries this noon, was occasioned from several rebel shells bursting directly over Point Lookout. Our reply was vigorous. There were no casualties.

Thirty days' furlough has been granted to the farmers of the Georgia State troops to allow them to sow their wheat.

All is quiet on Gen. HOOKER'S front.

OFFICIAL DISPATCHES FROM GENERALS THOMAS AND BURNSIDE.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 13.

The War Department has received dispatches from Gen. THOMAS, at Chattanooga, and from Gen. BURNSIDE, in East Tennessee.

Both dispatches are dated last evening, when all was quiet in front of their respective armies.

The tenor of the information from Gen. BURNSIDE is such as to set at rest any possible current public anxiety relative to his situation.

LATER FROM NEW-ORLEANS.

Probable Abandonment of the Overland Expedition—Shocking Railroad Accident.

The steamship Yazoo, from New-Orleans 4th instant, arrived at this port yesterday morning.

Information from the expedition in the Teche District, under Gen. FRANKLIN and Gen. ORD, indicates that it is endeavoring to return to New-Orleans, having failed to advance beyond Opelousas. Unforeseen difficulties seem to have been encountered. The roads are so bad that it is utterly impossible to keep the army supplied, and the water of the bayous is unfit to drink. Fortunately, the health of the soldiers was generally good.

The following dispatch from the New-Orleans Era shows that the army, on its retrograde movement, had reached a point fifteen miles east of Opelousas, and that the enemy was not inclined to let them depart peacefully. What our losses were in the engagement are not made known:

Special Correspondence of the Era.

BAYOU CARRION CROW, OPELOUSAS PARISH, Sunday, Oct. 18, 1863.

The rebels made another daring reconnoissance upon our front yesterday, when they were met by our cavalry, who drove them out of sight.

Gen. ORD has resumed command of the Thirteenth army corps, and Gen. WASHBURN has returned to the command of his division.

The water in the bayou is extremely low, and not fit to drink.

A Texas cavalryman, wounded on the 15th, died today.

The general health of the soldiers is good.

The naval expedition under Gen. BANKS had not been heard from since its departure.

The New-Orleans papers give an account of a shocking accident, resulting in great loss of life, which occurred on Sunday morning about daylight, on the Opelousas Railroad, in the vicinity of Company Canal, eight miles from Algiers, caused by an up train loaded with troops, dashing headlong into another up train which was standing on the track disabled, and the cars of which were also loaded with troops, crashing the cars together and making of both trains a heap of ruins.

The casualties, so far as could be ascertained, were eleven killed and sixty-five wounded, many of the latter very severely. The following is a list of their names:

Killed—Belonging to the 97th Illinois: Lieut. Martin, Richard Smith, Geo. Polk, (drummer,) Geo. Draper, John Corbitt, Wm. Reed, Martin Woods, Frank Akeman, C. W. Osborn, John Miller, T. B. Smith.

Wounded—In the 97th Illinois regiment: Aleck Chaput, Sunderland, M. Woods, Powers, Oglesby, James and D. F. Wicker, F. Brooks, J. Curry, Sam Girard, J. E. Hazy, J. H. McGee, Hickman, Bethards, James and John Cloud, M. Sigler, E. White, Halliday, Sargeant Slaten, J. Francis, E. Lowe, J. Ryan, Isaac Giberron, S. Massey, J. Huffine, R. S. Giberron, J. G. White, J. Globe, H. Palmer, Asa Barnes, Wm. H. Medlin, Lewis Woods, T. Smith, J. Kilzore, P. Huffman, Nicholas, Campbell, Berry, Pace, Zeits, Jeremiah, Dwyer, White, Knowlton, Woodrow, Pennington, Herod, Salers, Davisson, Rice, Kilborn, Stanton, Wyant, Sillwell, Matheny.

In the 64th Indiana regiment: E. J. Treat, (hospital steward,) Lafayette Martindale, James Pierce.

FROM THE SOUTHWEST.

The Burning of the Steamer Allen Collier.

CAIRO, Friday, Nov. 13.

The Memphis Bulletin, of the 11th, gives the particulars of the burning of the steamer Allen Collier. The steamer was lying 25 miles above the mouth of the White River, within 500 yards of the gunboat Eastport, which was covering her landing, when the guerrillas attacked her. Capt. BARTHOLOMEW, the commander of the gunboat, was on board the Collier at the time, and was captured together with the captain and crew of the steamboat. The gunboat would have shelled the guerrillas, but that they protected themselves with the prisoners they had captured. After setting fire to the boat, they marched the prisoners three miles into the interior, when they liberated them all except Capt. BARTHOLOMEW.

The number of prisoners of war now in military prison here, has increased to nearly 4,000. They cannot be called prisoners of war, being deserters from the rebel army, some of whom have been lying in the woods fifteen months, awaiting an opportunity to escape to our lines and take the oath of allegiance, for which purpose they will be sent to St. Louis.

Counterfeit.

ALBANY, Friday, Nov. 13.

Most dangerous counterfeit five hundred dollar bills on the Haverhill Bank, N. H., have just been detected in this city. It is a fac similie of the genuine and is engraved with red ground work—in the left hand and upper corner are the figures 500, and a man holding a tablet and a head of WASHINGTON. In the centre are two female figures over a bee-hive. On the right hand upper corner is a picture of Lady WASHINGTON. On the lower right hand corner are the figures 500, and in the lower edge, underneath, is a printing-press.

The Missouri Senatorial Election.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Friday, Nov. 13.

The ballot, which resulted in the election of Mr. BROWN to the United States Senate for the short term, this morning stood as follows: BROWN, 74; BRODHEAD, 66; VOGHEISE, 2. The next ballot resulted in the election of JOHN B. HENDERSON for the long term and stood as follows: HENDERSON, 82; PHELPS, 42; scattering, 12.

THE FRUSTRATED CONSPIRACY.

Additional Particulars of its Scope and Design—Vallandigham, Marshal Kane, James Clay the Leaders—Completion of the Defensive Preparations—The Excitement Waning.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 13.

The discovery of a rebel plot hatched in Canada to liberate the prisoners on Johnson's Island, and burn Buffalo, and ravage the commerce of Lake Erie is classified here with the finding of mares' nests. The telegraph at Sandusky, Cincinnati, Buffalo and Washington has dwarfed the just proportions of this horror. It is understood here from Canada that VALLANDIGHAM, HENRY CLAY'S beautiful son JAMES, and that pardoned villain, Marshal KANE, had fully arranged for passing through the Welland Canal an armed steamer whose mission was: First—To open the prison doors for captive rebels at Sandusky Bay. Second—To arm and equip these veterans, over two thousand in number. Third—To seize as many propellers on Lake Erie as were needed, and arm and man them. Fourth—To make Buffalo a heap of ashes, and her vessels in port charred skeletons. Fifth—To burn Cleveland. Sixth—To wipe out the commerce of Lake Erie. Seventh—To consume Detroit, and in effect to destroy the commerce and cities of the Lakes from Ogdensburgh to Chicago, almost at a blow. Lord LYONS got out of bed after midnight, to communicate the news to Mr. SEWARD, and afterward the Secretary of War was got up and got to the wires of the military telegraph.

We hear from the West to-night that, by telegraph received at Buffalo on Thursday morning, the sloop-of-war Michigan was ordered off the mouth of the Welland Canal, with the approval of Lord LYONS, to smash that secesh steamer if she came through. To preserve the equilibrium against these horrors, one Department of our Government calmly reminds timid inquirers of the obligation of the British Government in Canada and elsewhere, to put her hands on armed expeditions organizing within her territory to make war upon any one of the United States or prey on its commerce.

REPORTS FROM OTHER POINTS.

SANDUSKY, Friday, Nov. 13.

Everything is quiet here and in this vicinity.

There is very little excitement in the city.

Gen. Cox and his Staff passed to the Island this morning.

Everything is being put in readiness for the rebels, and with the troops here and on the way, Johnson's Island and Sandusky may be considered safe beyond a doubt.

Batteries are posted to fully command the entrance to the harbor, and would sink any vessel attempting to enter our bay.

The United States steamer Michigan is off Johnson's Island, all ready for action.

All the reports about an attempt at escape by the rebel prisoners on Johnson's Island, are simply false. There are no indications of any such intentions up to the present time.

BUFFALO, Friday, Nov. 13.

The Cleveland Leader of yesterday P. M. says a telegram was received between 12 and 10 o'clock, from the officers at Johnson's Island, asking that a regiment be sent to Johnson's Island immediately. In response 850 men of the Twelfth Ohio cavalry were sent at 3 o'clock this morning.

It is reported here (Buffalo) that the Captain of a propeller from Sandusky reports a tunnel had been discovered from the prisoners' quarters on Johnson's Island to some woods several hundred feet distant; also that about 600 muskets were found in the tunnel, which had undoubtedly been brought from Canada. The plot was to seize the United States steamer Michigan and two of the New-York Central propellers, and make a raid on the shipping and the City of Buffalo.

CLEVELAND, Friday, Nov. 13.

Lieut. HARRIS, commanding the Pittsburgh battery of six 12-pounder Napoleons and 125 men, passed here for Erie this morning, for defence against pirates.

DETROIT, Friday, Nov. 13.

An armed steamer sent out by the authorities to reconnoitre suspected points on the northern shore of Lake Erie, returned to-night. No indications of any hostile expedition were found, and it is doubtful if any exist.

THE MISSOURI ELECTION AND THE PRESIDENT.

The election of GRATZ, BROWN and HENDERSON, in Missouri, has elicited from the President a gleeful congratulatory dispatch to St. Louis. He congratulated BROWN and HENDERSON, to-night, upon the blissful fruits of their quarrel.

THE BLOCKADING SERVICE.

HEAVY DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZE MONEY.

How Fortunes Are Made in the Navy.

Particulars of the Cargoes of the Recent Captures on the North Carolina Coast.

WASHINGTON, Friday, Nov. 13.

Several valuable prizes have recently been finally adjudicated, and the money will be ready for distribution in the course of a week or ten days. Among them are the Memphis, the Britannia and the Victory. The former was captured by the United States steamer Magnolia, and yielded the snug sum of $510,914 07, after paying the expenses of adjudication. Acting Volunteer Lieut. WM. BUDD is the happy man who takes as his share $38,318 55, his vessel not being attached to a squadron at the time of the capture, and his share being three-twentieths of the half awarded to the captors. All the officers on this vessel belonged to the volunteer service, and their several shares amount to a handsome sum. The sailors, too, come into a small fortune for them, the seamen getting $1,736 86 to each; ordinary seamen, $1,350 88, and the landsmen, $1,157 91. The Britannia and Victory were captured by Commander R. H. WYMAN, of the Santiago de Cuba, the former yielding the sum of $169,695 72, and the latter $299,998 45, making $469,694 17—the captures being made within the space of a week. It will be noticed in this case that while the officers get liberal shares, the seamen each receive $897 67; ordinary seamen, $698 12; and landsmen, $598 40. Another steamer was captured about the same time, which has not yet been adjudicated—making altogether a very handsome sum. The tables in these cases are given below.

The Navy is in immediate want of seamen, and with such chances for fortunes it is amazing that the want exists for a single day. All will agree that "Jack" is reaping a reward for his services.

Admiral LEE has communicated to the Navy Department the particulars relating to the recent captures off the North Carolina coast, from which it appears that the cargo of the Robert E. Lee consists of 214 large cases and bales of shoes and blankets—some of the bales weighing two tons—150 cases of Austrian rifles, 250 bags of saltpetre, and 61 barrels of salt, provisions, pig lead, &c. Of 62 persons, composing the officers and crew, only 15 were natives of the United States. Among the passengers were C. E. STEWART, Belgian Consul, and HORACE H. WEBBER and H. W. ROOKE, Lieutenants in the British Royal Artillery. The vessel had no ship's papers.

The cargo of the Ella and Anna consists of 480 sacks of salt, 500 sacks of saltpetre, 281 cases of Austrian rifles, 500 barrels and 42 cases of paper. She had no ship's papers. Of 38 persons on board, only one was a native of the United States.

The cargo of the Cornubia consists of munitions of war, arms, saltpetre and lead, and was solely owned by JAMES A. SEDDON, of Richmond.

A quantity of official dispatches, mail matter, and private and public papers, some of them of considerable interest and value, were picked up in the surf by the boats of the Niphon, having been thrown overboard or dropped by the enemy.

Official dispatches say:

"About 2 A. M. Nov. 8, the blockading vessels off New Inlet were warned by a signal from the James Adger, of the presence of a blockade runner, and when the Adger pursued the strange craft along the beach, the Niphon stood in to cut her off. Escape being impossible, the pursued vessel was run ashore in half an hour after the chase began, but half an hour later the Niphon got her off uninjured. She proved to be the Cornubia, one of the most successful of the blockade runners.

She is owned solely by JAMES A. SEDDON, rebel Secretary of War. Some idea of the importance of this capture may be formed from the statement of her Master to the Commander of the James Adger, that, though the vessel was small, his Government could better have afforded to lose almost any other vessel. Acting Master BRECK, of the Niphon, reports that he went in boats to capture the crew of the Cornubia, who were on the beach, and succeeded. The next morning several men appeared on the shore, making signals to be taken off. Before a boat could reach them they were made prisoners by a party of soldiers, on whom the Niphon immediately opened fire, and killed and wounded several in their retreat. Soon after, eight men, making signals from the shore, were taken off by the Niphon's boat.

The Robert E. Lee was discovered by the James Adger on the morning of the 9th inst., and chase was given, which resulted in the capture of the vessel at 7:30 o'clock the same day. The Robert E. Lee left Bermuda five hours after the Cornubia."

For Our Prisoners at Libby.

BOSTON, Friday, Nov. 13.

At the suggestion of a number of merchants here, Mr. GEORGE H. STUART, of Philadelphia, Chairman of the Christian Commission, addressed the merchants of Boston on 'Change to-day, and read telegrams from Gen. MEREDITH and letters from our officers in Libby Prison, acknowledging the receipt and distribution of food and hospital stores forwarded by that Commission. Mr. C. S. TOBEY, who introduced the Speaker, was requested to open a subscription, and $1,300 were immediately subscribed. The subscription is now going on.

VERY LATEST FROM THE SOUTH.

THE OPERATIONS AGAINST LEE'S ARMY.

The Rebels Acknowledge their Disasters in Virginia.

Foreshadowing of Another Retreat of Gen. Bragg.

AFFAIRS GENERALLY IN THE SOUTH.

LATE OPERATIONS IN VIRGINIA.

From the Examiner, 9th.

Official information was received by the War Department yesterday, that two brigades of LEE'S army were, on Saturday, captured by a sudden and unexpected advance of MEADE. The dispatch bringing this intelligence gives none of the particulars of this disaster; but it was believed in official circles that our loss would fall little short of five thousand men. Gov. LETCHER and others, however, who arrived here last night, direct from the army, give not so sad an account of the affair. Their report is that on Saturday, about noon, HOKE'S and HAYS' brigades, being on picket, were attacked by about twenty-five thousand of the enemy, and after one of the most desperate fights on record, part of which was hand-to-hand, our men were surrounded, and all of them, except some six hundred of HAYS' brigade, killed or taken prisoners.

The number of our men taken prisoners is variously stated at from fifteen hundred to three thousand; the latter figure is probably nearest the truth. We also lost four pieces of artillery.

The fight is reported to have occurred at or near Kelly's Ford on the Rappahannock.

HAYS' brigade is composed of Louisianans and HOKE'S of North Carolinians.

It is believed that Gen. LEE expected MEADE to advance upon him, yet he was not prepared for so early and vigorous an attack. He knew MEADE had received peremptory orders to advance and give him battle wherever he found him, but thought it would take the Yankee several days longer to bring his army to the Rappahannock. It would now appear that Meade can advance as quickly as he retreats.

From the Enquirer, 9th.

Sunday, at all times fertile in rumors, was particularly so on yesterday. But we fear that the rumors of yesterday are too true, and, unfortunately, too disgracefully true. It was reported that Gen. ECHOLS had been disastrously defeated near Lewisburgh, Va.; but more than defeat—a shameful, unmitigated disgrace was permitted to befall our arms in the boasted army of Northern Virginia. Two whole brigades of the army of Northern Virginia were captured on Saturday. We learned this not as a rumor, but as a fact, from such a source that we cannot question its accuracy. We could not learn whose brigades they were nor even whether they were cavalry or infantry. But it matters not who the brigadiers are, not whether their commands are infantry or cavalry—the honor of the army, the interest of the cause, the safety of the country all unite to demand their dismissal from the army upon which their negligence has brought such irreparable disgrace.

THE LATE AFFAIR ON THE RAPPAHANNOCK.

From the Enquirer, 10th.

About 150 of our men, who were wounded in the battle at Kelly's Ford on Saturday, reached this city on yesterday morning. From their reports, and information derived from other sources, we make up some account of the affair.

HOKE'S and HAYS' brigades, of EARLY'S division, with two batteries of artillery, were on picket, north of the Rappahannock, at Kelly's Ford. The two brigades numbered only about two thousand. About 12 o'clock the enemy made a sudden and unexpected attack in such force that their skirmishers alone seemed to outnumber our whole force, and so quietly had they approached that they seemed to our men to have risen out of the ground. They were evidently well informed of our force and position, and had come down to surround and capture us. With this intent, their first effort was to cut us off from the river.

As they were forcing their way towards the river, the enemy closed around them, and a hand-to-hand fight ensued, in which numbers on both sides were killed. About six hundred of our men succeeded in reaching the river and escaping. Many are said to have been drowned in the crossing.

It is stated that the two batteries with the brigades were the second and third companies of Richmond Howitzers. But this is doubtful. Our whole loss in this unfortunate affair, in killed, wounded and missing, could not have been more than 1,500. HAYS' brigade only numbered 900 men at the battle of Gettysburgh, and it is not likely its strength has been much increased since. HOKE'S brigade, it is not likely, numbered more than a thousand or twelve hundred. Of the two brigades six hundred men escaped.

Col. GODWIN, formerly one of the Provost-Marshals of Richmond, was in command of HOKE'S brigade, and is said to have been wounded.

THE WAR IN VIRGINIA.

From the Examiner, 11th.

The Army of Northern Virginia was quiet yesterday, awaiting an attack from MEADE. There is a difference of opinion whether MEADE will attack us in our present position. Some think he will leave our front and make a flank movement toward Fredericksburgh.

No official report of the affair at Kelley's Ford last Saturday has yet been received, and private accounts afford us little additional intelligence. It is said by some that our whole loss in killed, wounded and missing will not exceed 900 men, but in the absence of an official statement it is impossible to make an estimate of our loss with any reliable accuracy.

FROM CHARLESTON.

The following telegraphic accounts of the operations of Gen. GILMORE, on the 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th inst., we publish in order as we find them in our Richmond files:

CHARLESTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

Slow firing has been going on all day on Sumter. Fifty-eight rifled shots were fired from Battery Gregg last night. Eighteen missed. All were directed at the southwest angle.

The number of rifled shots fired to-day were sixty-one, of which twenty missed; mortar shells, twenty-five, of which five missed; from the monitors, twenty-five, of which seven missed. The whole number of shot and shell fired at the fort during the present bombardment up to to-day, is 9,346, of which 7,700 struck and 1,666 missed.

The enemy's fire from Gregg and the monitors to-day was very poor. One monitor only was in action to-day. No casualties.

From the Enquirer, 10th.

The situation at Charleston remains as it has for weeks past. There is no material change. The Yankees keep up their fire continuously, indefinable, change of tone, which, to a people rendered doubly acute by long habit and deep interest, serves to mark the fall of the barometer and give warning of the coming storm.

A certain vague mistiness of detail; an uncertainty as to the actual position of affairs; confusion and contradiction in the various accounts which reach us, both from the enemy and our own side—all these are omens which the experience we have been forced to acquire in the art of divination tells us are to be interpreted in a bad sense. It is well that they should precede the unpleasing reality; that the public mind, inflated with too large a dose of confidence, and braced to too great a degree of tension, should be gradually depleted and relaxed. The power of adaptation, which is so strong a faculty of the human mind, and that simple philosophy which, though not derived from the schools, springs spontaneously out of the rough lessons of life, will enable the country to bear the disappointment of its high hopes, as it has before now endured more serious disasters with constancy and firmness. A little time and gentle preparation will render the process easier, and give the requisite tone to the energies and fortitude of the people.

The newspapers were enjoined, at the beginning of the war, and they have in general displayed commendable disposition, to observe a proper reticence as to the movements of troops and the probable plans of our Generals. It may be doubted, en passant, if the practice now prevalent at Charleston, of publishing the exact number of the enemy's shots which strike, and the amount of damage they do, is exactly in accordance with the prudent policy usually observed. But no matter what may be the general freedom from censure in this respect, there is one point on which there is much to blame, not so much for any warning or information it gives the enemy as for its sad effect upon our people. It is the continual and extravagant representations that are made of the advantageous positions occupied by our army, and the great results that are soon to ensue. The enemy's army is at one time hemmed in between a river and our own forces; at another, his flank is turned, one corps entirely cut off, and its destruction certain; again, his communications are so embarrassed that he must fight to save himself from starvation. These fanciful statements excite the contempt of the observer, who knows from general history or how rare occurrence is the absolute destruction or surrender of an entire army, and how prudent to bar all avenues of retreat. Applied to our own position, and read by the light of the history of the last two years, they excite an uneasy feeling of apprehension. They recall too many glowing promises of the same nature, all of which, now begetting an undue feeling of elation and high expectations, inevitably doomed to be disappointed even by more signal success than usually waits on military operations, have been followed by a feeling of despondency at the unsatisfactory sequel. Let all such extravagant predictions and "unending prologues" be considered contraband in future. The serious difficulties of the war are enough to try all our patience. Let us not add those engendered by reaction arising from overwrought expectation.

Consistent accounts reach us, not only of mistakes in execution, but of disagreement and discord in the councils of the Western army. It is certain that with such a state of things full efficiency cannot be expected from an army. The chief should be made to suit the Lieutenants, or the Lieutenants made to suit the chief. Until this is done the valor of our troops will probably win success upon a pitched field, but the full fruits of victory will not be grasped, nor the decisive results attained, which depend upon the elaborate execution of extensive combinations.

BRAGG'S ARMY.

From the Examiner, 11th.

The armies still confront each other in Tennessee, and the struggle may be renewed there at any moment. The lull there can be only temporary, for the indications are too clear to doubt that the enemy is determined and preparing for battle. The correspondent of the Atlanta Intelligencer writes from Missionary Ridge:

"Where the right now occupies Loudon, the enemy is having evacuated their fortifications on our approach, which now gives us the command of the Tennessee River at that point, and brings our forces within 25 miles of Knoxville, under cover of the enemy's own works. It is expected that there will be important movements in this direction at some future day, as our near proximity to Burnside's army must naturally suggest it.

"Our troops are panting for a move, having become tired of this one life, especially on these dreary heights and swampy valleys. The health of our men, considering their late exposure to cold rains, is very good. The most of the men now in our army have become well seasoned and hardened to camp life and duties. A number, however, are suffering from cold, &c., but no serious complaints. Three thousand fine, heavy English blankets have been distributed among Breckinridge's division, which were greatly needed; and if the Government and people will continue to provide for our soldiers, they will go through a more comfortable. Our bands play night and morning, and our boys are cheerful and in good spirits.

THE "TERRIBLE BLOW" INFLICTED ON GEN. LEE.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Nov. 10.

Military movements are again in great activity. In Northern Virginia, Meade has already signalized his return by a wonderful energy, and has inflicted a terrible blow upon the army of Gen. Lee. In Western Virginia the disaster to Gen. Echols' command shows the enemy active, bold, and enterprising. The Confederate General, devoted, is retiring, says the Lynchburg Republican, on Salem, and all expressions are entertained for the safety of the railroad. In North Carolina the enemy have landed in large force at Winton, and are threatening the Northern line of railroad at Weldon or some other point. On the Peninsula the enemy have been reported as sending in large numbers at Newport News. Thus all around Richmond the enemy are threatening active operations before the Winter has fairly set in the roads.

Meade has returned from his late retreat by no means coward or evincing any unwillingness to meet Gen. Lee; indeed, his activity and boldness, when compared with the negligence of somebody in the army of Northern Virginia, shows in striking contrast. He has captured two brigades and is reported as still advancing. Gen. Lee's army has been said to be ready and willing to trust the fortunes of battle, and we hope it may promptly and effectually banish the boldness which has seized and carried off two of its brigades. Whether Gen. Lee finds us giving battle in the forks of the Rappahannock or falling back to the old line on the Rapidan, we have no means of knowing; but should not be surprised or disappointed if he declines battle north of the Rapidan and retires to the position from which his late advance was made.

We should not be surprised if Meade, satisfied with the capture of the two brigades, did not hesitate to risk his laurels in a general engagement; but, ministering to Yankee vanity, parade his prisoners through Washington and other cities, and quietly settle down at the first good place for Winter quarters. The Yankee press and people rejoice over the material evidence of success, such as prisoners; take delight in parading them through cities; count and recount them as a miser his hoards, and satisfy themselves that lost the rebellion is fast dying out. Meade understands his vault of his masters, and may satisfy their aspirations by a congratulatory order and the parade of his captives through the cities of the United States. Having made such important captures, he will doubtless report Lee as flying to Richmond and himself swiftly pursuing. The Yankees, too much delighted with the prowess of their invincible Army of the Potomac to inquire into the speed of the pursuit, will settle down to the business of their next Congress, while Meade will go into Winter quarters in Fauquier or Culpepper, and await the Spring for the certain capture of Gen. Lee.

But will Meade be permitted to settle down into Winter quarters without a fight, after this bold and daring march into the Army of Northern Virginia? It is for Gen. Lee to decide whether prudence will best be served by attacking out the insult in a general engagement, or awaiting the Spring for its punishment. Whatever Gen. Lee may determine upon will be readily accepted as right and proper; but if the wishes of the people could influence him, they would like to see the punishment fall swift and heavy upon the army of Meade.

As to Gen. Echols, there has been so little received, and that so indefinite, that we cannot inform our readers as to the position of military affairs in that part of Virginia.

From Weldon no information of the enemy's movements have been received.

The only intelligence from Northern Virginia, on Saturday, was to the effect that fighting was going on, but to what extent is not reported.

THE LATE REBEL MISADVENTURE.

From the Examiner, 10th.

The unexpected misadventure on the banks of the Rappahannock occupies public attention in a most disagreeable manner, but the scanty intelligence received from that quarter is still insufficient to understand or estimate it fully. It is said that the cavalry had been ordered to the rear for the purpose of recruiting their horses, and hence the enemy was enabled to attack without ordinary warning or preparation. It is also reported that Hays' brigade did not number more than five or six hundred men, and that the loss in prisoners was, therefore, very much below what has been supposed. However these things may be, let us hope that an event so serious and mortifying may have the good effect of putting a conclusion to the series of similar accidents, which have rendered the neighborhood of Brandy Station and Kelley's Ford an ill-omened ground. What else may come of it will be so speedily known that speculation would be imprudent. Naturally, it might be supposed that this success should tempt Meade to immediate battle on an extensive scale. But he is cautious. He is unwilling to tread the path of his predecessors. The "capture of two brigades" may be sufficient to give him a new lease of that life which the next general action, undertaken by order from Washington, will probably terminate.

A VISIT TO GEN. LEE'S ARMY.

A correspondent of the Raleigh (North Carolina) Progress, on a visit to Gen. Lee's army, writes:

I rode over yesterday to Gen. Lee's headquarters, which consisted of a cluster of cloth tents pitched in a grove of oaks, surrounding an old meeting house. I found Gen. Lee sitting by a log fire at the mouth of his tent, with one of his aids, enjoying a social conversation over a late Yankee newspaper. Upon my approach, the old hero, without any formality rose and gave me a cordial welcome to his headquarters. (I had his acquaintance before this.) Gen. Lee is in blooming health, and spoke hopefully of our cause, and confidently of our final triumph in this bloody struggle for Southern independence. He remarked: "It is with us independence or nothing."

I have traveled over many miles of this (Culpepper) and the adjoining counties, once blooming as a garden, but now, as far as the eye can reach, is one wide waste and desolation. The Yankees have destroyed nearly everything. The palace and the negro quarter are torn from their foundations to furnish material for their Winter quarters; the fences are all burned; the luxuriant fields no longer wave with cultivated crops; not a cow, or a horse, or a four-footed beast of any kind, is left to disturb the melancholy silence. Even the birds seem to have taken their flight to climes further South.

YANKEE PRISONERS IN RICHMOND—AN EMEUTE ATTEMPTED.

From the Examiner, 7th.

On last Wednesday night a "spy," from Lieut. V. Bossieux's guard, on Belle Isle, while perambulating, in disguise, through the Yankee prisoners, overheard one of the prisoners say, "Well, they're going to plant cannon around us to-morrow, and all who don't want to stay here and freeze to death this Winter must make a break to-night."

The "spy" immediately sped to Lieut. Bossieux with the information he had obtained. The latter communicated the alarm to the guard, threw the sentinels forward, and sent to the barracks for one hundred additional men.

No attempt to break the lines was made, and it was plain that if any was contemplated it was checked by the demonstration of the guard.

Five pieces of cannon are now planted in positions bearing on the prisoner's camp at short range, and any demonstration to overpower the guard will result in the thinning out of their number amazingly.

FROM SOUTHWEST VIRGINIA.

From the Enquirer, 10th.

It will be recollected that a telegram, published Saturday morning, stated that Averill was advancing into Greenbrier County, Va., at the head of seven thousand cavalry. On Saturday evening a dispatch from Gen. Sam Jones, commanding in Southwest Virginia and East Tennessee, announced to the War Department that Averill had, with five brigades, fallen upon Gen. Eckolls, who had but a thousand men, and had most probably routed and destroyed his small force. Gen. Jones did not mention where the affair occurred or any of the particulars. Last night, in another dispatch, Gen. Jones sends intelligence that Gen. Eckolls had reached Union, Monroe County, but that his loss from the encounter with the enemy was unknown.

THE FIGHT NEAR LEWISBURGH.

LYNCHBURGH, Tuesday, Nov. 10.

The special correspondent of the Lynchburgh Virginian gives the particulars of the late fight, 26 miles west of Lewisburgh:

Five thousand Yankees, under Averill, who came from Beverly, attacked Jackson. The latter fell back to the point named, and was joined by Echols, and a severe fight ensued. Our loss was heavy.

Among the killed are Maj. Bailey, commanding the Twenty-second Virginia,—his body in the hands of the enemy. Capt. Ruder and Capt. Ruffner, of the same regiment. Capt. Thompson, of the same regiment, with all his company officers, were wounded. Lieut. Rand, of the same regiment, wounded, and in the hands of the enemy.

We lost one piece of artillery, and saved all our wagons. Gen. Echols, hearing a force (supposed to be under Scammel) was approaching from Kanawha to cut him off, fell back toward Salt Pond Mountain, and passed through Lewisburgh on Friday evening. The force expected from Kanawha arrived there next morning.

FOREIGN CONSULS AND COMMISSIONERS.

From the Enquirer, Nov. 7.

In expressing satisfaction at the dismissal of the British Consuls from this Confederacy, and the withdrawal of Mr. Mason from London, we certainly supposed that the step would be speedily followed by the like action toward the Consuls of other Powers, and the Commissioners to France, Russia, &c. Without this general action, there is a discrimination, an indication of resentment against one European Government beyond all the rest. In this discrimination—not in the dismissal or withdrawal itself—there is offence. If the order had been universal, for Consuls of all nations which do not recognize our independence, then there could have been no ground of complaint; the proceeding would have been avowedly on the general principle that it does not comport with the dignity of the Confederacy to continue in an attitude of solicitation, or go on to offer gratuitous courtesies and facilities, within our borders, to Governments which have so long delayed that official recognition of our sovereignty to which we were entitled more than two years ago.

It is true that the Government of England had shown itself more unfriendly than that of France, and was notoriously the obstacle to a joint recognition; so that the arguments for accession of all that quasi diplomatic intercourse were drawn mainly from the manifest hostility and insolent denial of common right, shown in the conduct of English statesmen, and especially of Earl Russell. Yet, the leading and governing reason for putting an end to our importunate attitude toward foreign Powers, applied to France as well as to England; and in the various articles which have appeared in the Enquirer, at least, on this vexed question, there never was a word in favor of drawing this invidious and unmeaning distinction. On the contrary, we repeatedly urged the withdrawal both of Mr. Mason and of Mr. Slidell, and the dismissal of all foreigners claiming to be Consuls—putting it always on the one broad ground that, as foreign nations do not recognize us, it does not become us to recognize them.

Hungry Confederates derive no nourishment from Mr. Slidell's breakfasts; neither does the marked condescension of the charming Eugenie warm us much at this distance.

Once more, the true and sole grounds for withdrawing Mr. Mason and dismissing British Consuls, holds good for withdrawing Mr. Slidell and dismissing French Consuls; namely: that both those nations still withhold the recognition to which we are entitled; and both still refuse to receive Consuls from the Confederacy.

We shall soon hear from England in what light they regard our exceptional action in the case of that Power. The British Government was not over friendly to us at any rate; and this proceeding may bring on more active manifestations of hostility. Certainly England will not long leave her subjects resident here without protection; such is not her habit. If our cessation of the quasi-diplomatic relation had been general, and had been applied to France as well as to her, (as we have hoped it would be) in that case the obvious course of those nations would have been to recognize us at once, and send regular Consuls to do their business, and regular Ministers to communicate with our Government at Richmond. But now that England has been distinctly affronted by the marked discrimination, she may possibly take another course—apply to Mr. Lincoln for reparation of any alleged wrongs done to her subjects, and help Mr. Lincoln to enforce that reparation; in other words, aid him to crush the "rebellion."

MONEY AND BREADSTUFFS IN RICHMOND.

From the Examiner, Nov. 29.

The Money Market.—The trade in gold and Yankee funds has been quite active for the last week, there being a large number of "blockade-runners" in town, who have been changing their rolls of Confederate notes with the brokers preparatory to their return to Yankee land. The rates of gold on Saturday were buying at $11 50, selling at $12 50. Silver—very little to be had; the brokers buy it readily at $9 to $9 50, and sell it at $11.

Breadstuffs—The market is very scant of Breadstuffs. There is a very small stock of Flour; not sufficient to the demand. Prices have greatly advanced, and it is impossible to quote anything like the market value. Prices range from $75 to $125, according to quality and the stress of circumstances. Corn meal was selling on Saturday at the groceries at $15 per bushel, and scarce at that.

YANKEE MOVEMENTS.

From the Examiner, Nov. 7.

We learn from a trustworthy correspondent, that the Yankee force, which lately appeared in Stafford, numbered not less than 7,000 cavalry, with eight batteries, all under the command of Kilpatrick. The detachment which was sent down as far as Brookes' Station, was evidently for the purpose of reconnoitering, and soon returned to the main body in the neighborhood of the Court-house. Our correspondent believes that it is the advance of Meade's army, which will reappear at Fredericksburgh, and endeavor to seize the town and heights; or, failing in that purpose, will Winter in their old quarters, between Aquia Creek Landing and the Rappahannock. Their magnificent fortifications are untouched, the vacancies in the railroad track will be easily supplied, and the water communication to supplies are the best to be found in Virginia.

FROM EAST TENNESSEE.

The War Department received yesterday the following dispatch from Gen. Ransom:

NARROWS, via Dublin, Nov. 8.

The following has just been received from Blountville: "Our cavalry, under Brig.-Gen. W. E. Jones and Col. Giltner, yesterday captured at Rogersville 850 prisoners, four pieces of artillery, two stands of colors, sixty wagons and 1,000 animals. Our loss, two killed and six or eight wounded."

(Signed,) R. RANSOM, Major-General.

ABINGDON, Va., Monday, Nov. 9.

Eight hundred and fifty Yankees, capturned near Morristown, Tenn., on Saturday, by Jones' and Gilmer's brigades, passed here this morning, en route for Richmond. They belong to the Second Tennessee and Seventh Ohio, of Carter's brigades.

Four pieces of artillery, 1,000 horses and 60 wagons are also reported captured.

[These are the prisoners reported yesterday as captured near Rogersville, Tenn.]

DUBLIN DEPOT, Friday, Nov. 6.

The enemy's forces have retreated to Greensville, our forces pursuing. At last advices they had crossed the Holston in small force, the enemy remaining at Rogersville. The Yankees under Anerill, estimated at 7,000 strong, are marching on Lewisburgh, Greenbriar County.

FROM BRAGG'S ARMY.

ATLANTA, Saturday, Nov. 7.

Advices from the front afford nothing important or interesting.

The enemy are slowly shelling Lookout Mountain.

Gen. Cheatham, arrived here yesterday, on leave of absence for a few days.

ATLANTA, Tuesday, Nov. 10.

Gen. Hood left this evening, with Gen. G. W. Smith, for Richmond, via Wilmington, where they will remain a few days with Gen. Whiting.

Gen. Hood's wound is doing well and he is in fine health and spirits.

FROM NORTH CAROLINA.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sunday, Nov. 8.

Advices from Weldon by the last train state that ten Yankee gunboats arrived at Corinton last Friday filled with troops.

It is thought that another force from Newbern, of 2,000 cavalry and 15 pieces of artillery, is designed for the same point. An adequate force has been sent to check them.

GOLDSBORO, Saturday, Nov. 7.

President Davis arrived here to-day at 11 o'clock A. M., and was enthusically received by citizens and soldiers. Being called for, he made a few remarks from the platform of the car. He said North Carolina had nobly done her duty, from the battle of Bethel to Chickamauga, and would do her duty in future, and that grumblers who sat around their firesides, finding fault with soldiers, thus dampening their ardor, would be remembered hereafter.

He closed his remarks amid loud cheers, expressing the hope that peace and prosperity would soon smile upon us as a free and independent people.

The train moved off amidst deafening and prolonged cheers.

The President seems in the enjoyment of good health, his fatiguing tour notwithstanding.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

ABINGDON, Va., Monday, Nov. 9.

Thomas White, proprietor of the Abingdon Hotel, was shot and mortally wounded in a difficulty with Col. Clarence Prentice last night.

The sending away of several thousand prisoners from Richmond, to Danville, Lynchburgh and elsewhere, has been delayed in consequence of the difficulty of collecting sufficient Commissary stores at any one of these points. Capt. Jackson T. Warner, Prison Commissary, has been absent several days, engaged in getting stores, and when he returns the prisoners will probably be sent forward.

It is a fact remarkable enough to be noted, that at this season, one year ago, the quantity of wood and coal in Richmond was not half so great as it is now, although the price now has just doubled from what it was then. This is a paradox of principles which perhaps some wiseacres on the subject of extortion can explain.

Hogs to be Impressed.—The impressment officers who hang around the turnpike inns and cross-roads of the country have extended the articles to be impressed to hogs, and the wildest alarm is said to exist among the porkers.

The officers commenced the impressment of hogs in this city on Thursday, and no sooner was it known than scores of grunters were withdrawn from the street and impressment market, and consigned to cellars and garrets, there to remain until the street is again a safe promenade for a hog.

The impressment officers thus far have only left one hog to each family, which is hardly enough to carry a family of two persons through the Winter.—Enquirer.

The Hog Impressment.—We are informed by the officials charged with the inforcement of the law of impressments that the Confederate Government has never authorised the impressment of hogs in this city; and furthermore, that the parties seizing hogs, under pretended orders, are doing so without the shadow of authority and should be treated as thieves, as they are.

These hog stealers have already swept several sections of the city, having scoured Maddox's, Union and Oregon Hills.

It is to be hoped that when the thieves make their next appearance the people will prepare themselves, the women with hot water, and the men with bludgeons, and turn the war upon the hog thieves.

Some of the fresh pork obtained by these scoundrels in the manner described was sold in the Old Market on Saturday. The police are looking after them.—Ibid.

Rebel Account of a Federal "Raid."—A Huntsville (Ala.) correspondent of the Montgomery Mail, giving a report of a recent Federal expedition into that region, says:

"Limestone and most of Madison counties were completely scoured and swept clean of horses and mules, cattle, sheep, poultry, hogs, meat, flour, &c. Two or three thousand horses and mules were taken in these counties—citizens, farms, plantations, &c., thoroughly stripped.

The loss to this section is very heavy, and the injury far greater than we have ever experienced, for we are now less able to bear it. Before we have lost of our abundance—this time nearly all of our working stock. We have had this year twenty-one visits from them. Stanley's big raid in July swept off largely of slaves, horses, mules, &c., and so did others. But we have patched up matters again, rigged up old wagons, new teams, &c.

This time all has been swept off, and our people feel as if it is useless to try to fix up again, even with old wagons, broken down mules and horses, as all may soon again be taken by another raid. We have not enough left now to haul and plow with, and a fine riding or harness horse in the hands of a citizen is a rarity, and milch cows are worth as much and more valued than negroes."

Plan for Recruiting.

The following plan for recruiting operations has been submitted to us for publication by an officer from the West who has had large experience in high position, and who is connected with the government of a State that has furnished the most successful example of voluntary enlistment:

Select eleven of the oldest regiments, (one from each Congressional District,) who will reënlist in the field, send them home, muster them out, pay them the same bounty they would be entitled to had they served out their full time, grant them thirty days' furlough, at the expiration of which time they are to go into camp, at such point in their district as they were originally rendezvoused, and complete their organization. As soon as remustered, to be paid the increased bounty, as provided by orders of the War Department.

This plan has already been submitted to a large number of regiments, and they have almost to a man agreed to reënlist. It has been approved by nearly every prominent General in the field, and adopted by the War Department.

Each regiment has a historical identity, which would be wrong to consolidate and wipe out. No Indiana regiment in this war ever, under any circumstances, turned its back upon the enemy,

Reinforcing the Army.

BRIDGEPORT, Wednesday, Nov. 11, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Allow me to suggest a plan with reference to the present call for 300,000 troops.

The call, as I understand it, is made in view of the expiration of the time of the present army next year, and the new troops are to fill the places of those discharged. Of course some in addition are needed also, to fill up the depleted regiments. But if the Government were sure of having all the old soldiers for two years longer, they would call for a much less number now.

Now, my plan is this: Extend the privilege of volunteering under the present call to the old soldiers now in the field, or, if thought best to limit it, to such as have served one year at least. Let these men receive the State and National bounties, and let them be credited on the State quotas under the present call. Then the States will have only the deficiency to make up by home volunteering. If the Government can afford to do so, let those soldiers enlisting thus have their new term of service date from the reënlistment, thus giving in the balance of their old terms. But, if this is not expedient, let the new term date from next 4th of July, or from the expiration of the old term, if that occurs sooner. The promise of a short furlough during the next six months, as the exigencies of the service will permit, might also be justly added.

The recommendations of this plan are so obvious and numerous, that they need hardly be referred to:

1. It removes from the old soldiers the hard feeling with which they have justly regarded the purchase of new recruits by enormous bounties, which they themselves did not receive. Could they get similar opportunities, they would fight and toil the more bravely and cheerfully. It would check the numerous desertions from their ranks for the purpose of reënlistment with bounty, by enabling them to obtain those bounties not only without risk, but with additional advantages.

2. It would save the Government enormous expense in raising, equipping and training the new levies, and putting them in the field. Great delay would also be avoided, and the army kept up without any violent and sudden changes from old troops to new.

3. It would promote the efficiency of the troops in the field, especially as their present terms of service approach their end. It is well known that the soldier is more apt to shirk, especially in battle, if the prospect of discharge is at hand.

4. It would relieve the States in their efforts to answer the present call and save them the great sums which they must otherwise expend in new family bounties, &c. It is not likely that any new draft would be required if the old troops were allowed to reënlist as proposed. B.

Extra Session of the Massachusetts Legislature.

MESSAGE OF GOV. ANDREW.

The Legislature of Massachusetts convened in special session on Tuesday last, for the purpose of adopting measures to promote recruiting for the army by supplying the State's quota.

The message of Gov. Andrew on opening the session, recites the facts which have made it necessary to convene the Legislature, and then reviews the legislation bearing upon recruiting, and the bounties offered to volunteers. The Governor adds:

"It has been represented to me by officers engaged in the recruiting service, as well as by many citizens and magistrates, that these bounties do not offer sufficient pecuniary inducements to enable the required number to be raised within the two months which scarcely remain to us.

With the present rewards of peaceful industry at home, and the expenditure required for the support of families left behind them, it is believed that both the pay of a soldier and these proposed bounties combined, do not afford a sufficient pecuniary compensation to attract volunteers in numbers large enough for the public need. And while I hold that the service of our country in the field, in support of her rights and liberties, against her enemies in war, is of inestimable honor, and is incomparable with all rewards of pecuniary or material advantage, I am none the less convinced that the burdens incident to that service should be equitably shared by all classes and members of the whole community; since all alike must share in its benefits, and will profit alike by the triumphs of the National arms.

I cordially agree, therefore, with all those who advise such additional legislation as will better distribute pecuniary burdens, alleviating them so far as they bear upon the soldier and his family, and equitably distributing their weight upon the people and the property of the Commonwealth. But I venture respectfully to urge upon every mind the consideration that we ought not to legislate ungily and only with a view to a present, technical, formal supply of our contingent.

With the eye of patriotic statesmanship, we are bound to survey the whole field of present and future duty and responsibility. We must remember that the national cause is our own cause, its armies are our own armies, the men whom we are summoned to reinforce are our own loyal, patriotic, brave and devoted brethren, to whose persistent valor it is due, under the blessing of God, that there is preserved to us a cause and a country, and that her symbolic ensign waves to-day over so many a scene of triumph dearly bought. We want not merely recruits, but men for the war; not mercenaries, but patriotic soldiers; men to whom the service means duty and honor for themselves, happiness and welfare for their children hereafter to the latest generation.

I am not of opinion, regarding the matter in the light of experience or of the wisdom of men in other affairs, that any increase of the bounty in hand of $125 now due to the volunteer, paid in advance, is the measure needful or even desirable for the procurement of real soldiers and honest service. Something is needed by many men to leave behind them at the moment of departure; something to stock the family supplies and to secure to them immediate and a certain independence from petty wants and cares. And that is already offered. But it remains to propose to the soldier a compensation to be based upon the service actually rendered in the army, reasonably proportioned to the rewards of peaceful industry at home. This, I think, is what he will ask. No less than this ought he to be required to accept. And when this is proposed by the government, I cannot doubt that the liberal equity of its offer for the procurement of volunteers and for the avoidance of a draft, will be felt to illustrate the justice of its inexorable demands for reinforcements, according to exigencies of the war, whenever they may occur hereafter."

The Governor also claims the consideration by the Legislature of the subject of paying the négro troops. He says:

"The employment of colored men as soldiers, usually regarded at the formation of these regiments as a mere experiment, has now become of universal acceptation. To the good conduct in camp, the proficiency in drill, the aptness to learn, the cheerful, the enthusiastic and persistent valor of these colored volunteers of Massachusetts, is due, in the largest measure, the existing confidence of the people in the capacity of colored American soldiers, and the favor with which they are welcomed through the army. I have the most authoritative testimony that your (our) infantry regiments have settled the question of the colored man's fitness for infantry service."

But I remember, with burning shame, that the men of the Fifty-fourth Massachusetts, who held the right of the advance on that terrible night of the 18th of July, in the assault on Fort Wagner—led by that gallant young American, whose spotless life, whose chivalrous character, and whose heroic death, there is no marble white enough to commemorate—that these men, wearing the uniform of the national army, carrying that flag of the Union and the colors of Massachusetts, accepted, sworn and mustered into the volunteer service, as a part of the contingent force of our own Commonwealth; who have made a name for their race as enduring as history, and have fought as none others could have better fought;—yes, with burning shame, I daily remember, that these men—soldiers as they are—are denied the wages of soldiers, and are put off with the ten dollars per month, clothing included; prescribed for all manner of uninspected, unenlisted persons of African descent, who are employed under an exceptional statute, for whatever service they may be found competent."

The message was referred by the action of both branches of the Legislature to a joint Special Committee, who met after the adjournment, and a bill was presented which proposed to give all soldiers hereafter enlisted or reënlisted, $20 per month from the State Treasury.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Naval Movements.

INCREASE OF THE NAVY—TWENTY-EIGHT NEW SHIPS TO BE BUILT—DESCRIPTIONS OF THEM.

It has been known for some time that the Navy Department are building a fleet of fast steamers. Some time since we gave a description of three or four of them. Since that time the fleet has been increased to twenty, of which five are ordered to be exceedingly fast, and the others as fast as the proper armament will allow. The following are the names of the twenty fast vessels:

Hassalo,	Kewaydin,	Tahgusta,
Pushmataha,	Mosholm,	Guerriere,
Illinois,	Wanaloset,	Ontario,
Minnetouko,	Watauga,	Keosauqua,
Piscataqua,	Antietam,	Willamette,
Iowa,	Kantoocook,	Quinsigamond,
	Arapaho,	Mondamin.

The machinery for the above vessels has already been contracted for by the following firms: Novelty Iron Works, New-York, cylinder, 100 inches; Etna Iron Works, New-York, 60 and 100-inch cylinders; Morgan Iron Works, New-York, 60 and 100 inches; Corliss Iron Works, Providence, R. I., 100 inches; Woodruff & Beach Iron Works, Hartford, 60 inches; Washington Iron Works, Newburgh, 60 inches; Globe Iron Works, New-York, 60 inches; Hazlehurst & Co. Iron Works, Baltimore, 60 inches; Hoole & Hunt Iron Works, Baltimore, 60 inches; Port Richmond Iron Works, Philadelphia, 60 inches; Gardner & Lake Iron Works, Providence, R. I., 60 inches.

The Navy Department has determined to build a fleet of vessels-of-war exclusively made of iron, and with double propellers. An important addition has been made to the proposed fleet, and instead of three it now numbers eight. Only one of the class has been finished, (the Wateree;) the others are about to be built. The Department has rendered it incumbent on the contractors to complete these ships as soon as circumstances will permit. The following are the names of the vessels of the new fleet: Suwanee, Samokin, Iuuscoota, Mohongo, Winnepee, Wateree, Ashuchot, Menocacy.

CAPTURE OF BLOCKADE RUNNERS.

The Department has reports of the capture, by the United States steamer Calypso, of the British schooner Herald, off Frying-Pan Shoals, on the 28th ult. by the Annie, tender to the United States steamer Fort Henry, of the British schooner Martha Jane, with a cargo of cotton and over $1,200 in specie; by the United States steamer Honduras, Oct. 15, of the steamer Mail, with a cargo of Sea Island cotton; by the Niphon and James Adger, 11th inst., of the rebel steamer Cornubia; by the James Adger, of the steamer R. E. Lee; by the Niphon, on the same day, of the Ella and Anna, with a cargo of stores and ammunition, bound to Wilmington, Del.

Arrival of Prize Prisoners.

A BELGIAN CONSUL AND A CONFEDERATE CAPTAIN AMONG THE NUMBER.

The United States steamship Newbern, which arrived here yesterday, brought as prisoners the officers, crews and passengers of the prize steamers Robert E. Lee and Ella and Annie, in all numbering 157 persons. They were conducted in a body before United States Marshal Murray last evening, and disposed of according to their deserts, or rather according to their nationalities, for the custom has been to discharge all who are aliens, which generally includes, as it did in this case, nineteen-twentieths of the whole number. Among the lot were a Confederate Captain of artillery named Peirce, and a Belgian Consul named Stewart, (an Englishman by the way,) who exhited his papers duly accrediting him as Consul for King Leopold to the port of Charleston. He has been Belgian Consul at Charleston for some time past, and sailed for Europe from this port several months since. He was on his return to his post, and got aboard the Robert Lee, at Bermuda, as a passenger. He was discharged by the Marshal on exhibiting his Consular papers. Capt. Peirce was detained as a prisoner of war. He also was on his return to the South from Europe, and embarked on the Robert Lee as a passenger at Bermuda. He was dressed in the uniform of a Confederate artillery officer, and appears to be a very intelligent and gentlemanly person. His conversation would indicate that he is of English birth. The rest of the party were mostly English and Bermudian sailors, and were discharged on their own statement that they were aliens.

The Marshal yesterday discharged forty-one of the crew of the prize-steamer Margaret and Jane, all of whom are foreigners.

Sixth District—Civil and Police Justices—Eighteenth and Twenty-first Wards.

In this District there are several candidates for both offices. On the Republican side Col. Walker, of the Twenty-first Ward, is a prominent candidate for Civil Justice. He is an old resident of the Ward, a good lawyer and an estimable gentleman. Mr. Weaver, of the Twenty-first Ward, is also a candidate on the Republican side.

On the Democratic side John H. Harnett, Esq., Horatio P. Carr, Esq., Robert C. Hutchings, Esq., and Theo. Fonda, the present incumbent, who has held the office for six years, are the candidates. Mr. Harnett is a resident of the Twenty-first Ward, and a lawyer of good standing, and very popular in the District, which is owing no doubt to the fact that he is a thoroughgoing Democrat, and earnestly devoted to the Union. Mr. Carr is also a resident of the Twenty-first Ward, and is at present a clerk in the County Clerk's office. Mr. Hutchings is, or was, a resident of the Eighteenth Ward, from which he was elected to the Assembly for two terms. Mr. Fonda resides somewhere in the country, but occasionally in the City, and as he has had the office for six years, it is probable that under the Democratic rule of rotation in office, he will have to give way to one of his popular Democratic competitors.

The candidates for Police Justice are Judge Kelly and Capt. Speight, both Union, and very excellent men. Judge Kelly is very popular, and if he is nominated the Democrats must put forward a strong man to defeat him. Capt. Speight is a worthy officer of the Police Department, very popular and eminently qualified for the position. The Democratic candidates are Gilbert M. Platt, an ex-Alderman of the Eighteenth Ward, who is strongly supported by his party; Daniel W. Clark and James Mahony, of the Twenty-first Ward, who bring no little strength to indorse and urge their claims.

Court of General Sessions.

BEFORE RECORDER HOFFMAN.

David S. Perry, a man of 60 years and upward, who keeps a restaurant at No. 26 West-street, was put on trial yesterday morning, charged with passing counterfeit bills of the New-England Bank, Boston. It appeared from the testimony that the accused passed three $5 bills of the above bank at different drinking-saloons in the First Ward on the evening of the 4th of September last. On his last attempt to pass one of the bills he was arrested. The circumstances of the case were such as to make it appear probable that the prisoner did not know the true character of the bills, and in consideration of this fact, the jury found him guilty of forgery in the fourth degree only. He was remanded for sentence this morning.

Michael Flynn and Joseph Cudney, jointly indicted for burglary in the third degree, pleaded guilty to an attempt to commit that offence, and were sentenced to two years each in the State Prison.

Jas. Kelly pleaded guilty to assault and battery, and was sentenced to 30 days in the City Prison.

Patrick McCarty, indicted for grand larceny, pleaded guilty to petit larceny and was sentenced to four months in the Penitentiary.

Cornelius Long was tried and convicted of petit larceny and remanded for sentence.

The Court adjourned to 11 o'clock this morning.

Very Important to Merchants.

Very important amendments of the Tariff will be made by Congress this Winter. Among other changes will be a declaratory amendment in relation to delaines, worsted and cotton goods. It seems that the tariff act has been interpreted so as materially to benefit our Eastern manufacturers by charging all worsted and cotton goods as delaines, with a duty of two cents per square yard and thirty-five cents ad valorem.

Our leading merchants regard this as oppressive, and as directly contrary to the provisions of the Tariff, and they have formed an Association that will spend $100,000 to bring the matter before Congress, and if possible have the duty of two cents per square yard declared erroneous.

Test cases have been prepared, and will be brought before the Courts, that there may be a judicial interpretation of the law. If the opinion that all worsted and cotton goods are not commercially delaines, is sustained by the Courts and by Congress, all parties who have overpaid duties, and made protest and appeal in due form and season, will be entitled to draw back.

Over a million of dollars of such over-charges will have to be paid to New-York merchants, and the prices of all delaines and worsted and cotton goods will be materially affected.—Mercantile Journal.

More Big Things "On Ice."

Fish seem to keep pace with the times, and in their appearance furnish notable evidence of unprecedented aqueous prosperity. Fine, large, shiny, clear and crisp are those just shown us by Mr. Jas. Z. English, of this City, from Lake Ontario, fit sequences to the splendid "brook trout"—ba-ting the brook—mentioned the other day, and mention of which begat quite a controversy as to their being taken in or out of season. But these fish from Lake Ontario are some of them fourteen pounds in weight, and the balance averaged about eight. Lake Ontario is a fisherman's sporting ground, and whoever wants a tug at a twenty pounder—more or less—can have it there. Forcibly brought to mind are these pathetic stanzas of a bard of the Thousand Isles—and probably of a thousand verses—in recalling Lake Ontario and its fish.

ON LAKE ONTARY.

Green are thy waters, green as bottled glass—
Behold 'em stretched thar! [
Fine muskalonges and Oswego bass
Is chiefly cotched thar!

Wonst the red injuns thar took their delight
Fisht, fit and bled—
Now, most of th' inhabitants is white,
With "nary a red!"

Wholesale Dry Goods Clerks.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You printed in the Times of Sunday a communication which reflects very unjustly upon our wholesale dry goods merchants, and could only have been written by an unfaithful or incompetent "salesman." It is perfectly well known that faithful and competent clerks in our great dry goods houses, as a class, receive higher salaries than any other class

LAW REPORTS.

United States Circuit Court—Nov. 13.

DECISIONS IN PRIZE CASES ON APPEAL.

Before Judge Nelson.

United States vs. The Schooner Ezilda and Cargo.—NELSON, C. J.—The vessel and cargo in this case were captured about the 12th of October, 1861, by United States steamer South Carolina, while attempting to break the blockade off New-Orleans. The proof is full on this point. The vessel was taken into the service of the Government, as also some arms on board the same. The vessel and cargo were condemned in the Court below. On appeal by the claimant, the case was submitted on briefs at the April Term last, but no copies of apostles were delivered to the Court. I have taken the original papers on file, and looked into them. There does not appear to have been any claim for the cargo. I agree the whole, ship and cargo, were rightfully condemned, and affirm the decree below.

The United States vs. The Schooner Albert and Cargo.—NELSON, C. J.—This vessel and cargo were captured off Rattlesnake Shoals, near the mouth of Charleston harbor, S. C., and about fifteen or twenty miles from Charleston, steering at the time a straight course into the harbor. The capture was on the 1st of May, 1862. The vessel, with part of her cargo, sailed from Matanzas, Cuba, stopped at Nassau, and took in the rest, and started, according to her papers, for the port of New-York. The cargo consisted chiefly of coffee, sweet oil, fruits and salt. The Captain admits he was wide of his regular course to New-York at the time of the capture, and also, that he was steering at the time square into the coast, which was, as explained by one of the officers on board the gunboat Huron, that made the capture, sailing square into the harbor of Charleston.

The excuse set up is that the vessel encountered great stress of weather and head winds, but it does not appear that she was in any way disabled or crippled, or that any reason existed for seeking to enter this port. The whole of the proofs satisfy us that the excuse set up is without any meritorious foundation, and do not reasonably explain the suspicious position of the vessel. She had been previously warned not to enter the port, as it was in a state of blockade, and the warning noted on her papers.

The Court below condemned the vessel and cargo. The vessel and cargo have been sold under an interlocutory order, and the fund remains for distribution.

We think the decree right and should be affirmed.

CONDEMNATION OF A SLAVEH ON APPEAL.

The United States vs. The Bark Augusta, et al.—NELSON, C. J.—This was a libel of information against vessel and cargo on a charge of having been fitted out and equipped at Greenport, Long Island, in June, 1861, for a voyage to the coast of Africa, with the intent to enter into the Slave trade, in violation of the acts of Congress particularly referred to in the libel.

Jacob A. Appley appeared as owner of the vessel and cargo, and put in his answer, denying the several allegations in the information. The proofs in the case are voluminous, and full on both sides. The Court below decreed condemnation of vessel and cargo—from which decree an appeal was taken to this Court. Pending the proceedings below, the claimant applied to this Court for a discharge of vessel and cargo, on entering into the usual stipulations with sureties, which application was granted, and the vessel discharged on the 28th October, 1861. She was again seized, on a charge of the same offence, while lying off Montauk Point, about the middle of November following, by the public authorities, and brought to Greenport, where she was the second time libeled for the offence.

The appeal still pending in first cause in this Court, the District-Attorney has very properly produced new proofs, which consist of the facts and circumstances upon which the vessel was the second time seized, and they are full to clear up any doubts that might have existed on the proofs at the hearing of the Court below.

The vessel was originally purchased by the claimant, Appley, through the agency of Appleton Oaksmith, who was his partner in a mercantile firm at Greenport. Oaksmith had the superintendence and control of the fitting out of the vessel the first time, ostensibly for the purpose of a whaling voyage. This was in May and June 1861. The vessel was seized the 23d of that month, as we have already stated, and was discharged, on stipulation, from the seizure on the 28th of October following, and delivered to Appley, the claimant, and again seized the middle of November. The facts and circumstances upon which this second seizure was made show that Appleton Oaksmith, again, had the superintendence and control of the vessel, and the fitting out and equipment of her, as in the first instance, and with the privity and concurrence of Appley, the owner, and, at the time, his partner in business. The new proofs before me show, beyond all controversy, that the second equipment of the vessel, ostensibly for a whaling voyage, was, in reality, with the purpose and intent to engage in the Slave-trade on the coast of Africa, and from the intimate connection between the two transactions, namely, the fitting out of the vessel in June and again in October, under the management of the same parties, the second cannot but reflect light on the first, and remove every doubt that might be raised on account of the character of the proofs being less clear and decisive in former. It is quite apparent upon these proofs, that although Appley may have been the legal owner of the vessel, even if he did not participate in the illegal fitting out and equipment, and did not expect to participate in the profits of the adventure, he held the title for the benefit of Oaksmith, and permitted him to assume the entire charge and control, as much so as if he had been owner. These proofs leave no doubt in my mind of the correctness of the decree below, and hence it should be affirmed.

For the United States, District-Attorney Smith; for claimant, Mr. Sawyer.

MURDER ON SHIPBOARD.

The United States vs. John M. Griffin.—The accused in this case was indicted for poisoning the master of the bark Betsey Williams, of which he was mate, with blue vitrol. The case was tried once before and the jury disagreed. The evidence was very fully reported at the time of that trial, and as it was not materially varied on the present trial we do not repeat it.

The jury were out more than two hours but finally brought in a verdict of not guilty.

For the United States, the District-Attorney; for defendant, Mr. Howe.

Insurance—The Question of Average.

SUPERIOR COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Justices Bosworth, Robertson and Monell.

Hiram C. Hotchkiss vs. The Commercial Mutual Insurance Company.—In this case the plaintiff shipped seven hundred barrels of apples by the ship Ohio, for Liverpool, and insured the same with the defendant, valuing the same, in the policy, at $2,000, and paying a premium of one and one-half per cent. on that valuation. During the voyage, the ship, by the perils of the seas, was brought into great distress, and for the common safety a jet tison of cargo was made, which included four hundred and seventy-six barrels of the plaintiff's apples. In making the jettison, from the necessary exposure of the cargo while the hatches were open, the remaining two hundred and twenty-four barrels of the plaintiff's apples were wetted and damaged by sea water, as alleged, to the amount of $448.

The plaintiff claiming it to be a general average loss, brought action to recover his indemnity under the charter.

Upon the trial the Court directed a verdict for the plaintiff, and ordered that all questions in the case be heard at the General Term in the first instance.

The exceptions now came before the Court for argument, and the defendant's counsel contended that the subject insured, "fruits," being a memorandum article, was, by the policy, free from average unless general; that the insurers in such case are not liable for any amount or extent of partial loss.

The terms "free from average unless general," apply to averges, whether damages or charges of every kind, unless general average. They do not let in an absolute liability for all kinds of loss on the occurrence of the slightest injury, whether by way of damage or charge, if that could be the subject of general average.

The plaintiff's counsel contested these points.

Decision reserved.

William M. Evarts for plaintiff; D. D. Lord for defendants.

The Contract for Paving Sixth-avenue—Suit Against the City for $25,000.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Before Justice Brady.

Thomas K. Downing vs. The Mayor, Aldermen, &c., of the City of New-York.—This is an action brought by the plaintiff (who was the contractor for paving Sixth-avenue, from Carmine-street to Forstered by street,) to recover $25,000 for damages sufbinishing him by reason of his being prevented from the work his whole contract, by the action of the Common Council. After the plaintiff had commenced passed of paving the street, the Common Council a resolution prohibiting him from paving that portion of Sixth-avenue lying between the outside rails of the Sixth-avenue Railroad. Plaintiff went on and finished the pavement in the other part of the street, and brings this action to recover the loss to him by not being allowed to pave the rest of it. Case still on.

John W. Edmonds for plaintiff; John R. Hackett for the defendants.

Decisions.

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Justice Bosworth.

Milton Swazze vs. Fernando Wood.—The verdict set aside and cause restored to the calendar on payment of the costs of the inquest and $10 costs of this motion.

Werner vs. Strauss et al.—Motion for injunction and receiver granted, with $10 costs to abide event; but defendant, ——, may be relieved from the injunction and receivership on executing such an undertaking as is mentioned in a memorandum filed with the papers.

Before Justice Monerief.

Prince vs. Scott.—Injunction granted.

Kennedy vs. Nichols; The Same vs. McGwin.—Orders granted,

THE PAMPHLET OF GEN. GANTT.

Repentance and Confession of a Rebel Officer—An Interesting and Important Document.

We have received from Hon. E. W. GANTT, (formerly member of Congress-elect from Arkansas, but since the rebellion an Acting Brigadier-General in the Confederate service,) a pamphlet, bearing the imprint of "National Democrat print, Little Rock, Ark.," which, from its great interest as giving an inside view of rebel operations in the Southwest, and the feelings and ideas of an intelligent Southerner on the present hopeless aspect of the rebel cause, we herewith print entire. The title-page of the pamphlet is: "Address of Hon. E. W. GANTT to the People of Arkansas." It is dated "Little Rock, October 7, 1863."

E. W. GANTT TO THE PEOPLE OF ARKANSAS.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: Since the 3d day of June I have been a prisoner in the Federal lines.

Having but recently been through the entire South, having studied its resources, and wept over its ruin, and having become fully acquainted with its condition, and the character of its rulers, I have chosen, after long hesitation, to remain here and address you, in preference to being sent home and exchanged. I am now out of the service, and can therefore speak with unreserved freedom.

My course in this struggle is known to the country. In the army and in prison, with a fire in front and in rear, I have been with you and of you so long as hope remained. And to-day, I know no devotion so strong as that I bear to my southern home, and to the masses of our people, whose terrible sufferings bind me closer to them now than ever.

I shall give you my views and counsel for what they are worth, frankly and fully in this address, and care not for the consequences to myself. It is the path of duty, and I shall follow it fearlessly.

I shall speak to you as an Arkansian—shall therefore confine myself more particularly to what has occurred in our midst since the commencement of hostilities, and may thus give a prominence to events and persons, that they would not otherwise deserve. As I fear no one, I shall spare no one.

CONDUCT OF CERTAIN LEADERS IN THE BEGINNING OF THE STRUGGLE.

In the commencement of this unfortunate struggle, our State hesitated. But when the shock of arms came, she opened her treasury and poured out her best blood. Her troops were removed beyond the Mississippi River, upon the principle, that there was the place to defend her soil. We acquiesced. The principle was doubtless correct. For a time, all things went well enough with us. We were only annoyed by partisan feuds and broils, by that selfish faction which so long ruled our people, and left their debasing influences upon society.

But the poisoned cup had been prepared for us in the very beginning. we were destined to drain its dregs to the bottom. Our people, plundered, whipped and oppressed, were to bow their necks to the yoke of a political adventurer, clothed in lace and brass buttons, who owed all he was to their kindness and charity. HINDMAN and the JOHNSONS—names inseparably linked with the sorrow and ruin of our people—formed a coalition, and drew into it the cast-off scum of old parties! From that day may date the ruin of our people, if not of our whole cause. Not that I intend attributing to them great force or capacity, but, that circumstances of long ago, linking HINDMAN to DAVIS, and intrigue upon the part of JOHNSON, were to place HINDMAN on a larger wave than a craft of his size could ride securely. So bitter and rancorous had been the hatred of these men toward each other, that such a union, if made publicly, would have shocked and startled our people. But it was done by stealth. It leaked out by degrees.

The promotion of Capt. J. B. JOHNSON, brother of ROBERT W. JOHNSON, in Hindman's Legion, at HINDMAN'S instance—the urging of HINDMAN'S promotion by Mr. JOHNSON in the secret and corrupt antechambers of Richmond politics—the appointment of Mr. JOHNSON'S near relative on HINDMAN'S staff—the urging of HINDMAN'S further promotion, and stronger and stranger than all, the procuring by a trick of Mr. JOHNSON, of the transfer of Gen. HINDMAN to this Department, are cumulative evidences of this corrupt bargain—a bargain in which the blood and treasure of our people was to go to enrich the JOHNSONS. HINDMAN was to be transferred to this Department, and by his aid, a great party was to be built up in our midst, and the enemies of the JOHNSONS put down. Having for years used the public treasure to put down foes and build up parties, now the blood of the people is to be used for the same purpose.

Mr. DAVIS was eager to do anything for HINDMAN. Would scruple little about the means or the result to the people; yet, in this instance, he hesitated. Mr. JOHNSON assured him that our people wanted HINDMAN here. That he was the man for the occasion. But with all this Mr. DAVIS would not send him by "authority;" yet, would permit him to be smuggled across. Our people were amazed at his advent. More so, when they found that Mr. JOHNSON had brought him, and that the Press at Little Rock, heretofore his abusers, was subservient to him. It was voiceless so far as HINDMAN'S usurpations and oppressions might be. No other reason has ever yet been given for its mysterious silence, than the prompt appointment by HINDMAN to positions of influence, of near relatives of the editors of these papers. And so the plot thickens.

I call the instances of appointees referred to in this address, I do not intend accusing them of complicity with the leaders, and may as well say so here,

CONDITION OF AFFAIRS WHEN HINDMAN CAME HERE—HIS OBJECTS AND ACTS.

When HINDMAN came here we had no army on our soil. Nor, indeed, any hostile army threatening us. The policy of the Confederate authorities had been announced. It was that no more regiments should be organized, but, that all men liable to military duty, should be enrolled in regiments then existing. This policy was in the way of HINDMAN'S building up for himself and the JOHNSONS, a great array of satellites, by the "appointing power." Therefore, in the teeth of this policy, and disregarding authority, he organized and officered some forty regiments. The poor soldier could not choose his own officer. He might not choose what would be regarded as Johnson-Hindman material. But the creation and continued existence of an officer as such, depended upon HINDMAN'S breath alone. It remained now to be seen what one who had crawled in the dirt before the people when he wanted place would do when he held supreme power.

Among his first acts was to declare martial law all over the State, and to appoint patrols of ten with a Captain to each township—a new military organization of his own creation. Among their duties was to assist in arresting and imprisoning, without charge or complaint, the suspected freemen of Arkansas. And many a poor creature thus torn from home and family, died in a loathsome prison, or perished by the wayside! Would you believe it, my fellow-citizens, that two or three lines from HINDMAN or one of his subordinates has been all the commitment upon which respectable citizens, with their heads shorn, have lingered a year in the Penitentiary, treated as ordinary convicts? The records are in the City of Little Rock.

But this is not all. He plundered our people most mercilessly. Anarchy and despotism vied in their rights. His Commissary Department was so miserably managed, that, with an abundant country to draw and collect supplies from, it was so neglected, that, I am told, in many instances, he took bread from the mouths of helpless women and children, whose only stay and support had perished by disease or the bayonet. He assumed to regulate prices. By this arbitrary and tyrannical means, he caused great suffering, and afforded increased facilities for the growth of fraud and crime, while all honest men were well nigh impoverished. He ordered cotton to be burned in regions remote from navigation, and where an army will never tred, and where, if it should come, it could not more than transport supplies, much less haul cotton. And he sent brutal, rough men to execute these orders. If a citizen complained, he was snubbed, plundered or imprisoned! Oftener all of these things. Of all these things Jeff. Davis was duly informed.

When long absence and tales of distress, coming from the plundered homes of tollworn soldiers, impelled them from impulses not to be despised, to force their way home, to stop the cries of suffering babes, and soothe the sorrow of heartbroken wives, with the intention of again returning to their commands, he has not waited their return, but treated them as deserters, had them hunted with negro dogs, and when caught, executed with a fiendishness alike cruel and shocking to humanity!

He has, I am told, appointed Military Commissions which should keep no records, and from their midnight recesses spoken away the lives of citizen and soldier. In one instance this mysterious and worse than Jesuitical tribunal condemned to six months' imprisonment a citizen of our State. With a stroke of his pen, he raised the penalty to capital punishment, and the victim was accordingly executed. What the supposed offender did—what he was accused of doing—there is no written record left. VOLTAIRE says that in Africa, tyrants who execute with their own hands criminals condemned to death, are justly called barbarians. He would be puzzled for a name for the tyrant in this instance.

In other cases he is said to have caused men to be executed without trial, and even to have witnessed the execution. In others again, he is said to have seized citizens and put them upon trial before military tribunals, and had them executed. In one instance, the offence being Unionism, it was ascertained after trial and sentence, that the supposed offender was a good Southern man. A pardon from HINDMAN was started, but the bearer only reached there in time to see the lifeless form of the murdered man being borne from the desecrated spot of his execution. OF ALL THESE THINGS JEFFERSON DAVIS WAS DULY INFORMED.

LOSS OF THE INDIAN COUNTRY—GEN PIKE.

He turned the Indians against us. Thus leaving us defenceless and threatened by a savage foe in the West, besides the loss of that whole territory. There was but one man on the continent who could control them. Nature, education, habits and appearance, had peculiarly fitted him for the task. That man was Gen. ALBERT PIKE. He should have been permitted to remain there. HINDMAN and JOHNSON intrigued him out. Mr. DAVIS preferred risking the loss of that country, and our ruin, to the loss of his pet. He even permitted Gen. PIKE to be dragged through the country like a common culprit, between a file of soldiers! What hope had a poor down-trodden citizen, when a General officer, and he one of the first men of the nation, could be thus treated with impunity at the instance of one of DAVIS' creatures? Of all these things Jefferson Davis was informed.

RESPONSE TO OUR APPEALS—COMING OF HOLMES.

But our people in the soreness of their agony, and from the depths of their oppression, petitioned Mr. DAVIS for relief. Month after month rolled by and no response. Still, month after month, they groaned, and suffered, and supplicated! Their appeals for relief fell upon leaden ears. And while the people suffered, the JOHNSONS and HINDMAN feasted and flourished and were glad. But at last, the current of agony and of complaint was too great. The tardy response came! And what, oh my suffering countrymen, do you suppose that response is? It is, that

"HINDMAN IS THERE WITHOUT AUTHORITY."

What a terrible retribution we had a right to expect! The least we could hope, had his acts been done by one here by authority, would be that he would meet removal and prompt punishment. And, surely, that one who, here, "without authority," had robbed, pillaged and destroyed—oppressed and murdered, and crushed the very life out of our people, would be put upon his trial as a culprit, and meet a felon's doom! We shall see.

In amazement, you would ask me if Mr. DAVIS knew of these things. All of them. Besides what private citizens all over the State had written him, Gen. PIKE, in written charges, and in powerful published pamphlets, made most of it known to him and the world. But R. W. JOHNSON and his followers are supreme at Richmond. He owns the whole representation from this State, except Mr. GARLAND, who has all the sense and manliness of the concern. Ver ly, the "vessel of State must have been violently agitated, or such foul dregs could never have risen to the top!" One HANLY did venture to whisper in his own room, with locked doors, to a few citizens, about these outrages, but he locked their mouths with a pledge of secrecy before they left, lest "BOB JOHNSON" should think he had turned traitor to him. And poor old MITCHEL would talk so much on both sides, that, as usual, he neutralized what he said, while Mr. GARLAND'S utterances were stifled between affection upon the part of DAVIS for HINDMAN, and subserviency to Mr. JOHNSON. The latter gentleman will not desert HINDMAN yet. The harvest of place and power, reaped by them, is too great to lose. Better the people groan and suffer. So, after all his wickedness, HINDMAN is still to remain here. But to soothe the public, and blind it, a new man must be brought over—one they can use, of course. Mr. JOHNSON finds him. A weak, superannuated old creature, who was made "Lieut.-Gen. Holmes" for this express command. The interests of Arkansas being subordinated to that of the JOHNSONS, and to the hate of Mr. DAVIS, for our poor oppressed people demanded Gen. PRICE—or rather begged for him piteously—our days for "demanding" having passed.

The acts of this poor, unfortunate and pitiable old man are known to all. Our people breathed free for a moment after he came—for the Press here belonging to the coalition, he was eulogized excessively. But they soon saw the stroke of HINDMAN'S hand in all his acts. As Gen. PIKE justly remarks, his Lieutenant

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Reports from the Army of the Potomac say that the barbarous habit of picket-shooting has been revived by the rebels, and our men find it necessary to keep well under cover unless they are anxious to be made targets of. The enemy still present a strong front on the south bank of the Rapidan, and the river being very low, makes guarding it a task of trying difficulty. Spade operations by the rebels have been energetically resumed.

Reports reach us from Chattanooga of a widespread dissatisfaction in the rank and file of BRAGG'S army, the practical proof of which is the large number of deserters entering our lines. A telegram says that Gen. LONGSTREET'S command of 16,000 men has gone into East Tennessee, and a considerable force of rebel cavalry has occupied Iuka. This looks very much like a serious threat against BURNSIDE; but the tenor of the information from that General, just received by the Government, dispels all anxiety respecting his ability to take care of himself.

Gen. BURNSIDE'S resignation, a long time since tendered, has, we are told, at last been accepted. Gen. FOSTER has been assigned to the command thus made vacant.

The conspiracy of the rebels to destroy the cities on the Lakes, and thus create a startling diversion in favor of their cause, seems to have been deeply laid. Additional information comes to us of their design to burn and lay waste the cities of Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, and every other town from Ogdensburgh to Chicago, and to obliterate entirely the commerce of Lake Erie. VALLANDIGAAM, JAMES CLAY and Marshal KANE are said to have been the arch conspirators. Reports from Sandusky say that everything is quiet in that vicinity, and that all the preparations are made to guard against danger. There were no indications on the part of the rebel prisoners at Johnson's Island of an intention to escape.

Blockading service has its discomforts and vexations, but they are fully compensated for, at least in some instances, by the handsome sums of prize money which fall to the share of those engaged in the business. Our Washington news this morning gives an account of the early distribution of prize money in the cases of the captured steamers Memphis, Britannia and Victory. In the first case, Acting Volunteer Lieut. BUDD takes the very respectable sum of $38 318 55 for his share, and not a man of his crew receives less than $1,736. This may be an extraordinary case, but, generally speaking, the prospect of good pay is so very excellent that it may well be wondered at that the navy is absolutely suffering for seamen, and enterprising men do not avail themselves of the chance to make fortunes.

The United States steamer Massachusetts arrived yesterday at Fortress Monroe, in forty-two hours from Charleston bar. When she left firing was still kept up on Sumter, and the fort was entirely demolished. The rebels put up a flag every night, which is shot away every day. There had been no firing on Charleston of late.

FROM EUROPE.

News from Europe, two days' later than that received by the Bohemian, was brought to Halifax yesterday morning, by the steamship Asia, and telegraphed to this City. There is nothing of extraordinary interest in the advices. A severe gale had visited England, doing some damage to life and property, but not to a serious extent. A company had been formed, under the title of the National Steam Navigation Company, of London and Liverpool, with a capital of 2,000,000 pounds, to accelerate the substitution of powerful screw-steamers for sailing vessels, in the American and other trades. Three new steamers have been already purchased, and contracts made for others, to ply between Liverpool and New-York. The rebel rams in the Mersey and LAIRD'S ship-yard continue to be strongly guarded by the Government, and the possibility of the escape of the vessels is remote. A discussion of American topics, between "Historicus" on one side, and Mr. LINDSAY and GEORGE SANDERS on the other, had appeared in the columns of the London Times, and the former maintained the best of the argument. The bankruptcy of Z. C PEARSON, resulting from his extensive and unfortunate adventures in blockade-running, was under investigation, and some singular developments had been made. The Empress EUGENIE had returned to France. At Paris, Bordeaux and Havre the Mexican Consuls had been compelled to cease their functions, and their duties are temporarily performed by the Consuls of Guatemala. The rebel pirate Georgia had arrived at Cherbourg to provision and refit. The Schleswig-Holstein imbroglio and the Polish insurrection present no strikingly new features. In Warsaw the suspected inhabitants were treated with great severity. Among the passengers by the Asia is Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Money market was restored to ease yesterday among the Stock Exchange borrowers, and the Railway speculation turned strongly upward. Gold, 147½; Bills on London, 161½@162 ₱ cent. The Secretary of the Treasury in the afternoon ordered the transfer of five millions Legal Tender Notes from his Washington office to this City.

Breadstuffs were in more demand, yesterday, and advancing. Provisions were in good request; hog products were dearer. A moderate business was reported in Cotton, Groceries, Hides, Leather, Fish, Fruit, Metals, Coal, Laths, Lime, Oils, Salt, and Tobacco. Hay, Hops, Wool, Tallow, and Whisky were actively inquired for. The Freight market exhibited less animation.

ACCOUNTS OF DECEASED SOLDIERS.—A correspondent, who writes with knowledge, shows through our columns that unjust charges have been made against the authorities concerning the delay in the settlement of the accounts of deceased soldiers. There have been, and are delays, but some of them are unavoidable, and others are in a fair way of being prevented. The subject is one of very great interest, to a large and constantly increasing number of persons, and it is to be hoped the machinery of the Government bearing on this matter will be adjusted as soon as possible, for there is certainly much complaint.

The writer of the letter to which we refer furnishes directions for claimants as to the proper mode of making application for the dues of deceased soldiers; and if this matter is attended to, many cases of hardship will be at once remedied.

The Stripping and Starving of our Prisoners.

The picture drawn by an eye-witness of the condition of the paroled prisoners just returned from Richmond, which was given in our last issue, though so horrible, we trust was not passed over by any of our readers. It is almost incredible that any people who ever even so much as heard the name of Christ—any people not sunk clear down to the very lowermost depths of pagan barbarism—should thus deliberately strip their captives of the clothing necessary to protect them from the cold, and then inch by inch starve their shivering bodies to the bone. And yet it is no more to be denied than that there is a sun above us.

Two weeks ago yesterday morning one hundred and eighty Northern soldiers, returned prisoners of war, tottered from the steamboat to the hospital in Annapolis, bare-headed, bare-footed, and almost bare-bodied, and so attenuated and unstrung that they looked almost like so many running skeletons. Within six days of that morning nearly one-third of that terrible procession—fifty-three out of the hundred and eighty—had sunk into the merciful grave. Another third, it is said, must soon follow. And the few that gentlest nursing will be able to save will live only with ruined constitutions, the mere wrecks of their former selves. These once brave soldiers had been stripped and starved in the Capital of the rebel Confederacy. And, more horrible yet, they gasp out their testimony that the thirteen thousand other Federal prisoners in Richmond are in like manner freezing and famishing, and their entreaties are that, for God's sake, we would somehow procure their relief.

There can be no doubt that the deliberate determination has been made by the rebel chiefs to torture our prisoners to death, unless our Government will yield to their trumped-up claim for fifteen thousand paroles, for which no equivalent has been received, and on that basis reopen exchanges. They mean to carry their ends by ruthless cruelty, since impudent pretension will not avail. Even did they really think themselves right in the dispute about the exchanges, could they show, in fact, with all the accuracy of a mathematical demonstration, that their claim is correct, yet, were they men of ordinary civilized manhood, they would consent to any injustice sooner than inflict these terrible atrocities upon innocent and helpless prisoners. They would yield anything sooner than abandon their souls to absolute brutality. There is not another people in Christendom capable of such abandonment. But it comes natural enough to these arch-traitors. It is simply the old story—the natural final issue—verifying the words of the great dramatist:

> "Treason and murder ever kept together,
> As two yoke-devils swore to either's purpose."

This slow, cold-blooded, remorseless making way with thousands of Union prisoners, is but the natural acme of the barbarities practiced by these wretches from the start—barbarities which an English officer, who has seen long military service in Asia and Europe, long since characterized to be such as "no war of ancient or modern times had exhibited, and which the savages of America, Africa or Polynesia never approached."

Now it is of no use to remonstrate or protest. Words were as well wasted upon tigers and hyenas. The Richmond Enquirer, the organ of DAVIS, with worse than brutal insensibility, with absolute fiendishness, mocked and flouted at the little half-naked, famished band departing for Annapolis, in terms like these:

> "From the observations of the Ambulance Committee, it appears that there was a very marked contrast between the two sets of prisoners, thus crossing each other under precisely the same circumstances. The Yankees—among whom it was remarked this time that there were scarcely any foreigners—were despondent, sulky, helpless and abject; our men were gay, cheery and hopeful, and, with loud cheers and unanimous stamping of crutches, hailed the land of Dixie. This conforms to the remark often made by neutral observers as to the spirit and bearing of the two armies."

The exhaustion of our brave fellows, in consequence of the terrible privations which had been put upon them, are gloated over as making the "Yankees despondent, sulky, helpless and abject," and is exultingly held up in contrast to "the gay, cheery and hopeful mood" of the released rebel prisoners who, thanks to our Christian treatment, were in the highest spirits the best physical condition could supply. The Enquirer fitly winds up its devilish effusion of malice with the taunt:

> "We would assure those Yankee soldiers that death on the field were far better than captivity here this Winter, and would accordingly counsel them also not to be taken alive."

The other leading paper of the rebel Capital, the Examiner, is just as shameless in its infernal wickedness. It sums up the programme thus:

> "The Yankee Government, under the laws of civilized warfare and the cartel, are entitled to these men, and if they will not take them, let them be put where the cold weather and scant fare will thin them out in accordance with the laws of nature."

It does not at all surprise us to see in the same paper the statement, which we copy this morning, that the prisoners, in their desperation, have been wildly beating about for some forcible chance of escape; and that their keepers have brought cannon to bear upon them with the design of "thinning out their numbers amazingly" at the first demonstration.

But these noble defenders of the Union must not be left longer to their agonies. It will be a crime before humanity and high heaven for our Government to allow this thing to go on. At any cost, at any sacrifice, it must be ended. We cannot reason these demons into any just exchange, and it is useless again to attempt it. To undertake to frighten them into it by practicing similar barbarities upon their prisoners is impossible, for it would but make us devils also. We have no way but to yield. Give them their demands. Concede anything, everything, no matter what, if it will only ransom these heroes from the gripe of their tormentors while life yet flickers. We can afford it. The world will take account of the contrast in the spirit of the two parties to this war, and it will enure vastly to the moral power of the National cause. Every soldier in the field will also take account of it, and his nerves will be strung to a yet keener vigor for a just retribution upon these enemies of himself and his country. We adjure the Government to deliver those thirteen thousand Richmond prisoners. In the name of their gallant deeds for their country's flag—in the names of the mothers and wives, and sisters and children, whose hearts are wrung with the tidings of their sufferings—in the name of the sensibilities of every loyal man in the Republic—in the name of civilization—in the name of humanity—in the name of God—we demand that these victims of Confederate fiendishness shall be rescued, at whatever cost.

Meade's Movement.

There is nothing in Gen. MEADE'S line of advance to and across the Rappahannock that affords any indication of the route by which he means to push his further operations. The crossing at Kelly's Ford would be made whether he proposed to move by Fredericksburgh or by Culpepper. Gen. HOOKER made it his point of crossing in the movement by Fredericksburgh, while Gen. MEADE in the last advance passed at this same point for his movement by Culpepper. In the meantime there is no reason for public impatience at the present pause in the forward movement. The object of it, doubtless, is to allow the completion of the railroad to the Rappahannock. A few days ago there were yet six miles of the road to be rebuilt. When this is done, which ought to be by the beginning of the coming week, it will afford a channel of supplies for his army, and permit a further advance. The works at Rappahannock Station, both those which the rebels had raised and the additions that have been made to them, will furnish a tête-de-pont for the crossing and security for the magazines accumulated at that point. In the fresh advance on which Gen. MEADE is about to enter, there is not so much occasion for any very recondite strategy as for an opportunity to bring the enemy to a decisive battle. The large, and sometimes even superior force of rebels that has hitherto met all our attempts to advance beyond the Rappahanrock, has made manœuvering for an advantageous position the first consideration with our Commanders. We take it that MEADE has this time the relative superiority of means to make fighting the main object of his campaign.

Political Railroading.

The World comes promptly and properly to the rescue of the Central Railroad management. As the special guardian of the Democratic interest in this State, that journal becomes necessarily the special champion of its most powerful ally. The fact that the management of the Central Road finds so zealous and eager an advocate in the organ of the Democracy, is quite conclusive as to the partisan manner in which its power is used.

The World thinks it "undoubtedly false," that the Central Road runs free trains to Democratic Conventions at the expense of the stockholders. What the World "thinks" on that point is of little consequence. What it knows would be more important, if it could be induced to tell. We venture to say that there is scarcely a man on the line of the road, of ordinary intelligence, who does not know the statement to be true. The Company did not run free trains to the loyal mass meeting at Utica: they charged full price even for every returned soldier who wished to attend. But if it had been a party Convention, seeking to elect some opponent of the Government to some high office, it could have commanded the track and the cars of the Company ad libitum. In the canvass a year ago free trains were run repeatedly to Democratic meetings. We do not expect the World to censure this, but it has no business to ignore it.

Our neighbor thinks that "all stockholders who hold their stock as an investment will be quite satisfied with regular dividends of seven or eight per cent." So the managers evidently suppose. So they would be, if satisfied that the road only earned enough to justify these dividends. But it is impossible to convince the great body of the community that the Central Road, traversing the wealthiest and most thriving portion of the whole country, connecting the West with the Metropolis more directly than any other road, and doing an overwhelming business at all times, makes a profit of only seven per cent. while the Hudson River Road divides seventeen. That it makes more than this every stockholder fully believes. What becomes of the excess the present managers probably know, but are not likely to reveal. New ones might possibly throw valuable light on the subject.

We suggest to the World that discussions or assertions, concerning the ownership of either this journal or of that, are not likely to throw any special light on the management of the Central Railroad. It has the advantage of us, moreover, in such a controversy; its present owners are quite unknown, and what their personal motives may be for any course it may pursue, is likely therefore to remain a subject of painful conjecture. Nobody, we believe, has hitherto owned it for more than five or six months at a time; there is reason to suppose, therefore, that it will change its views on the Central Railroad, as it has done on every other subject, within a reasonable time.

SECESSION.—Col. GANTT, formerly of the rebel army and now a prisoner of war, in his admirable and powerful address pronouncing the rebellion a failure and avowing his return to his allegiance to the National flag and Constitution, suggests that Mr. SEBASTIAN, of Arkansas, resume his seat in the Senate of the United States. He has always been a loyal man, and opposed the rebellion. The State is now in the possession of the Union forces. If its civil Government were in the hands of loyal men who have taken the oath of allegiance to the Federal Constitution, there would probably be little opposition to the renewed representation of the State in the National councils. It certainly is desirable that it should be so represented as soon as possible.

The Case of the Slaver Augusta.

We notice the affirmance in the United States Circuit Court of the decree of forfeiture against the bark Augusta as a slaver. Our readers will recollect that she was a vessel fitted out by the notorious APPLETON OAKSMITH, of this City. He did not have the title to her in his own name, but had the entire charge of her, and was fitting her up ostensibly to go on a whaling voyage. The Government seized her, however, believing that she was intended to go to the African coast. Her owners gave bonds for her, and receiving her again into their possession, boldly prepared still to carry out their intention and send her to sea without any change in her fitment or alleged destination. There have been times when vessels seized for the Slave-trade and bonded, have been allowed to proceed upon their voyage, but those days are past. The Government officers, finding that the enterprise was apparently being continued, did not hesitate to seize her again, and this time the owners did not bond her, but left her in the custody of the Court till this second case should be tried. Both cases in due time were tried—the first before Judge SHIPMAN, who decided against the vessel, the second before Judge SMALLEY, who has not yet decided either way. An appeal was taken from Judge SHIPMAN'S decision to the Circuit Court, and on this appeal the District-Attorney gave evidence of the proceedings of the vessel subsequent to her being bonded until she was seized the second time; and Judge NELSON now affirms the decision, holding that these new proofs show clearly that her second equipment was for a slaving voyage, and from the relation of this to the first equipment, it was clear that that was also a voyage with that intent.

As the Circuit Court has thus expressed its opinion as to the second equipment, it is fair to expect that Judge SMALLEY will also decide against the vessel. His decision in that case will stand in the rather remarkable position of having been affirmed before it is made.

Judge NELSON does not allude to the subsequent conviction of OAKSMITH for being engaged in the Slave-trade, and his escape from prison; but these facts will help to confirm the impression of the justness of his decision, if any such confirmation is necessary.

THE ELECTION IN DELAWARE.—A very active political canvass is going on in Delaware for the election of a Member of Congress. Mr. SMITHERS, the Union candidate, is a man of ability, an eloquent speaker and a thoroughgoing supporter of the Government in its prosecution of the war against the rebellion. His opponent, CHARLES BROWN, is, practically, and to all intents and purposes, a Secessionist. He was formerly Collector of the Port of Philadelphia, and has but lately taken up his residence in Delaware. Public meetings, large and enthusiastic, are held in various parts of the State, and the Union men hope for a very decided victory. In another part of this morning's paper we copy from the Delaware State Journal, a speech made by Mr. RAYMOND at Wilmington on the 6th inst., in which the various points involved in the National contest are discussed. Among them are the subjects of arbitrary arrests, the object for which the war is carried on, and the question of Reconstruction. The ground taken on the latter point is, that no State can possibly release any one of its citizens from his allegiance to the National Constitution,—and that much less can it release them all; that they are, therefore, as much in the Union to-day as they were before the rebellion broke out.

In Delaware as in every other Slave State which has been delivered from the rebel rule, the local issue of paramount importance relates to the abolition of Slavery. The rebellion has transferred the agitation of the Slavery question from the North to the Slave States, where it belongs, and where practical action can be taken upon it. The war has released the people of the Slave States from the oligarchy which has so long suppressed all freedom of speech and of thought upon this subject. It can now be canvassed like every other subject of public interest,—and that is all that is necessary to secure its overthrow. The result of such canvass in Missouri is seen in the late election. In Maryland, also, the Emancipationists are in a decided majority, as they will unquestionably be in Tennessee, in Louisiana, and sooner or later in every one of the Slave States.

In Delaware the issue is openly made and boldly met. Although there are but about 1,700 slaves in the State, the system seems to have had hitherto a very strong hold on public sentiment. But the conviction is becoming universal that the industry, wealth and prosperity of the State, will be greatly promoted by the abolition of Slavery and by inviting free labor to take its place. And we have no doubt that the verdict of the State will be in accordance with this sentiment.

UNITED STATES SENATE.—B. GRATZ BROWN has been elected United States Senator from the State of Missouri. He is a man of decided ability, was one of the earliest and most zealous Republicans in the State, and is equally zealous in his advocacy of immediate emancipation. His election marks an era in the political history not only of Missouri, but of the whole country. When Slave States begin to elect Abolitionists to the Senate of the United States, we may fairly infer that the world is making progress. We trust the example of Missouri will be imitated.

CORRECTION.—We accidentally neglected to state yesterday that the splendid jewelry of Miss CHASE'S trousseau, of which we gave a detailed description, was from the well-known establishment of Messrs. TIFFANY & Co. It was one of the most tasteful and elegant ornaments ever prepared in this country, and the firm by which it was furnished are entitled to full credit for the taste and skill displayed in its manufacture.

Musical.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—BELLINI'S opera of "La Somnambula" was the attraction here last night. How marvelously fresh and charming are the melodies in this work, notwithstanding the many, many years of hackneying they have had to undergo! Would that we had more of such subjects treated in so superb a manner. The distribution last night was in all respects good. Miss KELLOGG is one of the most graceful and charming Aminas now on the stage. The music lays easily within the best parts of her voice; her execution of it is in every respect neat, modest and effective; her dramatic rendering of the character is in the highest degree pleasing. With such strong points in her favor—and blended, we may add, into a consisent and lovable whole—it is not remarkable that Miss KELLOGG always achieved a new success in this part. Throughout the performance she was in admirable voice. Signor G. LOTTI was the Elvino. This gentleman's efforts have been confined heretofore to German opera. It was only in "Macbeth," under Mr. MARETZEK, that he gave the promise of a career. The sweet quality of his voice—assisted perhaps by the entourage—astonished and pleased every one. In BELLINI'S opera he has an opportunity which he can hardly hope to better, however much his ability to seize it may improve. He succeeded remarkably. Visibly nervous, he contrived to reserve his best strength for the second and third acts, where strength is most required. There are few tenori-de-grazia now before the public with more acceptable voices than Signor LOTTI. Time and practice will accustom him to the business of the stage—in which he is evidently inexperienced—and study will, we are sure, reveal new beauties in a voice already so acceptable. Signor BIACHI was a good Rudolpho, and Miss FANNY STOCKTON, although too timid to do full justice to herself, sang the music of Lisa with ability. The orchestra and chorus under Mr. MARETZEK were both admirable.

To-night the new biblical opera of "Judith" will be given for the second time.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—Mr. GRAU gives his last performance here to-night. The programme is a "combination" one, introducing "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "La Favorita." In these works all Mr. GRAU'S artists appear.

IRVING HALL.—The fourth of Mr. THEODORE THOMAS'S admirable "popular musical matinees," will take place here to-day. The programme opens with BEETHOVEN'S second symphony, and the remaining instrumental pieces are the overture to "Oberon"; quartette from "Rigoletto;" nocturne and march from the "Midsummer Night's Dream: the "Bon-Bon" Polka; and the "Gedankenflug" waltz. In addition to these, Mr. THOMAS has the services of two admirable vocalists, Mrs. JENNY KEMPTON and Mr. S. C. CAMPBELL.

THE SCIENCE OF DENTISTRY.—No portion of the human system is so liable to decay as the teeth, and their loss involves serious difficulties in the mastication of food, as well as baneful influences to the digestive organs, and a general distortion of the features of the face.

Therefore, for many centuries master minds have been occupied in devising means to prevent the decay and loss of the natural teeth, and also in perfecting a system of constructing substitutes to supply the deprivations of nature. The advancement of the science of dentistry has been gradual; many years since it afforded an artificial means of manducation—yet the process was scarcely a success, for, beside being painful in use, the apparatus employed was uncomely in appearance, and not in harmony with the other features of those who were to wear it. Thus it was usually observable that it was not furnished by nature, and this fact became palpable when the mouth was opened, as it revealed the metal plates and other fastenings which were thus exposed to view.

Among those who took the initiative steps to correct these glaring deficiencies, prominently stands Dr. JOHN ALLEN, formerly Professor in the Ohio College of Dental Surgery. He early perceived that the true method in copying after nature was to employ art in concealing art; that the most beautiful and symmetrical teeth did not always appear to the greatest advantage in the mouth; but, on the contrary, those slightly irregular looked much more natural; that the teeth gave character to the physiognomy of individuals, and should be as varied as the expressions of the persons for whom they were intended; thus, bold and strongly marked features require prominent and irregular teeth; those of thin, small visage should have diminutive, convex teeth; while a broad face should have larger teeth with less convexity; and that any teeth set very true always appear stiff and mechanical.

Being possessed of considerable inventive genius, and thoroughly informed of the requirements to be attained, pressing chemistry and other sciences into his service, Dr. ALLEN set about accomplishing his purpose, and after ten years of patient exertion, not only achieved the acme of his expectations, but far exceeded them, by discovering a system of producing and applying artificial dentures, by means of which the contour of the face, the natural articulation and the expression of youth are restored. This last statement seems extraordinary, and might be questioned; however, the writer has had ocular demonstration of the change in several personal friends, and has viewed the photographs of numerous individuals, taken in duplicate, one with and the other without the teeth and appurtenances, and in every instance the effect is equally striking, and all proving that this invention is of vast value to mankind.

The singular mode of practice adopted by Dr. ALLEN produces the following results: In having the teeth garnished with an indestructible artificial gum, roof and rugæ of the mouth, without seam or crevice, with all the delicate tints and shapes peculiar to those of nature. The sunken portions of the face are restored to their original fullness, thus rejuvenating the waning cheek, which cannot be done in the usual manner of inserting artificial teeth. The inside of the teeth and gums have the same form as the natural organs. To this form the tongue is readily adapted, and the enunciations become clear and distinct. A truthful expression is given to the teeth and mouth, which makes them appear in perfect harmony with the other features of the face.

No metal plate can be seen in laughing, gaping, or speaking, for the teeth are firmly set in the artificial gum, which also covers the plate, and represents the natural roof. This gum consists of a silicious compound, which is applied and fused upon the teeth and plate in such a manner as to fill up all the insterstices around the base of the teeth, and unites them firmly to each other and to the plate upon which they are set. Hence there can be no foul secretions to vitiate the saliva or infect the breath; and, the teeth being so firmly secured, great strength and ease are enjoyed in mastication, while the usefulness and appearance of the mouth are restored to a degree of perfection not excelled by Nature herself.

Dr. ALLEN is highly esteemed by his professional brethren and men of science, both in this country and on the Continent of Europe, and has received numerous testimonials from institutions and corporations, consisting of gold and silver medals, diplomas, certificates of honorary membership, etc. For some time past Dr. ALLEN has been practicing his profession, in connection with his son, at No. 22 Bond-street, in this City. His well-known affability is of great advantage to his brother dentists, as he is always willing to aid and advise with them during the few hours he can spare from his regular duties.—Tribune.

"LIFE A FAILURE."—Why is it that so many merchants fail? Answer—Because they are not adapted to the business. Were the "right man in the right place," selected on phrenological principles, success and not failure would be the rule. Read the Phrenological Journal for particulars; $1 50 a year, or 15 cents per number; sent by first post by FOWLER & WELLS, No. 308 Broadway, New-York.

Morton's Gold Pens are now sold at the same prices as before the commencement of the war; this is entirely owing to the Manufacturer's improvements in machinery, his present large Retail Business and Cash-in-Advance System; for, until he commenced advertising, his business was done on Credit and strictly with the Trade.

The Morton Gold Pens are the only ones sold at old prices, as the makers of all other gold pens charge the Premium on the Gold, Government Tax, &c.; but Morton has in no case changed his prices, Wholesale or Retail.

Of the great numbers sent by mail to all parts of the world during the past few years, not one in a thousand has failed to reach its destination in safety; showing that the Morton Gold Pen can be obtained by any one, in every part of the world, at the same price, postage only excepted.

Reader, you can have an enduring, always ready, and reliable Gold Pen, exactly adapted to your hand and style of writing, which will do your writing vastly cheaper than Steel Pens; and at the present almost universal High-Pressure Price of everything, you can have a Morton Gold Pen cheaper, in proportion to the labor spent upon it and material used, than any other Gold Pen in the World. If you want one call on A. MORTON, No. 25 Maiden-lane, or inclose stamp for circular.

Chloasma, or Moth Patches.

Blemishes on the face, called Moth, are very annoying, particularly to ladies of light complexion, as the discolored spots on the skin show more strongly on blondes than on brunettes, but they contribute greatly in marring the beauty on either, and anything that will remove Moth Patches without injuring the skin in texture or color, would no doubt be considered a great achievement in medical science. Dr. B. C. PERRY, having devoted his whole time and attention to Diseases of the Skin, will guarantee to remove Moth Patches, Freckles, and other discolorations from the face without injury to either texture or color of the skin. His success in this, as in other branches of his specialty—DISEASES OF THE SCALP and Loss of HAIR—will warrant him in guaranteeing a CURE IN EVERY CASE. AGAIN NEW TESTIMONY

READ.

HARLEM, July 30, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. VON EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done, I now hear well, and feel as I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. I hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

CATARRH CURED.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 23, 1863.

I have been suffering for the last three years from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery and very painful. My nostrils were continually obstructed with a pouring of fluid. I have had frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, generally attended with spitting, often with a fullness of my throat, together with a soreness and a dropping. Dr. VON EISENBERG has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I now feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. VON EISENBERG is as skillful as it is successful; it is impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S care, with a certainty of being speedily cured. I give this with gratitude and pleasure. I cannot forbear again saying that my voice, which was hoarse and thick when I applied to Dr. VON EISENBERG, is now clear and good; indeed, I feel abundantly satisfied.

JAMES LITTLE,
No. 245 7th-st., New-York.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 8.

I have been suffering for years past from a severe Catarrh, with a great heaviness over my eyes, with a severe depression, great uneasiness, and pain in my head, great difficulty in breathing, and a continual accumulation in my nostrils, which gave me restless nights for several years. I have consulted several physicians, who pronounced me to be consumptive. What I suffered for so long a time is indescribable. My system was entirely disarranged and greatly debilitated. I not only felt weak, but I had a cloud continually before my eyes, and my ears were so affected that I was threatened with a total loss of hearing. I must say, I think, I was guided by Providence to come to Dr. Von Eisenberg, who not only cured me of my Catarrh by removing an astonishing quantity of disagreeable matter from my head, but herestored me to perfect health, a blessing I have not enjoyed for many years. Now I enjoy a good night's rest, and pursue my business with comfort. I must acknowledge that Dr. Von Eisenberg's mild and scientific treatment for Catarrn deserves the highest commendation, as the principle which directs his system of curing Catarrh is such as to render success certain.

JAMES FURLONG, No. 556 2d-av.

No. 124 ALLEN-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

Iconsulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR,

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

JUNE 25, 1863.

My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not bear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG'S unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

HUGH GILLON,

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ.

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

"IN HOC VINCES."
AS AN EXHILARANT TONIC,
ROMAINE'S CRIMEAN BITTERS
Is the perfection of CHEMICAL AND MEDICAL ART,

from the fact that, although it highly exhilarates, no DROWSY, STUPEFYING REACTION follows. In this regard we

CHALLENGE THE WORLD TO EQUAL IT.

Some time since the formula or list of ingredients was submitted to

SURGEON-GENERAL HAMMOND, U. S. A.,

who expressed his unqualified approbation of the combination, in addition to which

in various localities, with many others, from personal trials, have rendered written and verbal testimonials, confirming, beyond any doubt, its tonic and restorative properties.

The following certificate is of more than ordinary significance, from the fact that the late Dr. Chilton was a graduate many years since of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, then in Barclay-st., New-York, practiced medicine for a brief time, after which gave his attention almost exclusively to Analytical Chemistry, and was a member of the New-York State Medical Society up to the time of his decease. Dr. Pohle is of German birth, of large attainments in general science and well-known in this City for his skill in Chemical Analysis.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 14, 1863.

From a knowledge of the ingredients and their proportions entering into the composition known as we are enabled to speak of it in terms of high commendation. Calisaya, or Peruvian Bark, being one of its principal constituents, together with Roots and Extracts, having decided medicinal properties, we have no hesitation in recommending it to physicians and the public generally, as an invigorating Tonic, intended to stimulate the digestive organs.

ROMAINE'S CRIMEAN BITTERS,

From its alterative properties, it is calculated to prevent, by its daily use, in moderate quantities, Constipation, Fever and Ague, mild forms of Neuralgia and Rheumatism. It is an antidote to the effects produced by change of water and diet, correcting Diarrhœa, curing Dyspepsia, Colic, Sick and Nervous Headache, Nausea, Sea Sickness. It is expressly adapted to females of delicate constitutions and the infirmities of age.

This preparation is composed exclusively of vegetable materials, containing no metallic or mineral substance whatever. Its taste is aromatic, warming, and acceptable to the palate and stomach.

JAMES R. CHILTON, M. D.
JULIUS G. POHLE, M. D.

OFFICE OF POST SURGEON,
BEAUFORT, S. C., Sept. 16, 1863.

Messrs. W. CHILTON & Co.: The cases of Cr[illegible]ean Bitters have safely arrived, and the article has given unbounded satisfaction. I gave a case of it to Dr. Wurts, the Medical Director, who liked it at once, and it was well indorsed by Surgeon-General Hammond, who arrived the next day. I have distributed it for trial, and it is unanimously declared to be just the thing for this climate. Could you not, with advantage, establish an agency at this place? Dr. Hayden, the Post Surgeon, wants a case sent to him by the next steamer, and I also want another.

AID FOR THE FREED PEOPLE.

The undersigned, appointed a Committee to act under the following resolution, adopted at Cooper Institute, on Monday, 9th instant:—

Resolved, That the Committee be charged with the more immediate duty of calling on our citizens for subscriptions to meet the wants of the negroes on the Mississippi, whose sufferings we have just heard described, and that an effort be made by them for a simultaneous collection in our churches on the Sunday preceding the National Thanksgiving; that the money raised be paid to the Treasurer of the National Freedman's Relief Association, to be distributed at their discretion; earnestly appeal to their fellow-citizens of New-York and vicinity for aid in behalf of the destitute freed people of the South and Southwest.

The need is pressing and should be met at once. As our armies advance and as the blacks are able to reach our lines, the ablebodied men enter the service as soldiers, teamsters or otherwise. These want no help; but the women, the children and the infirm are in terrible straits. The Government gives them scanty rations, as it does to all the destitute, who are loyal; but these unfortunates need clothing and shelter. Without these, they will perish by hundreds during the coming Winter.

Besides the numbers, greatly, no doubt, to be increased, congregated at other points, there are between 40,000 and 50,000 who need immediate aid, on the banks of the Mississippi, between Helena and Natchez. They have come into our lines from plantations which had been stripped of every eatable thing, and on which, had they remained, they must have starved. They have come in, after weary marches with our troops, carrying what they could upon their backs. How little could a mother, with her babe in her arms and little ones clinging to her skirts, bring besides these? Multitudes have nothing but the poor clothes in which they left their homes, and these are nearly gone.

Fellow-citizens: Shall we not give largely of our abundance to relieve these suffering fellow-creatures? Not only is our humanity appealed to, but our national honor is at stake. Every pang of the suffering of these people, which we do not alleviate, will be counted our disgrace. If we shall have taken the ablebodied to fight our battles, and have left all the rest to perish, their blood will cry out against us, and our emancipation measure, which should be our glory, will be our infamy. Besides, the suffering of these people within our lines may, and will, be used as an argument by the rebels to induce the blacks to win liberty by fighting for them, rather than for us.

Let us reflect upon these things! An immense work is before us; but it is not too much for our strength. It is only necessary to bridge over the interval between compulsory and free labor. This has already been done in Gen. Saxton's Department. There, the Blacks, not two years free, are self-supporting, requiring aid only for their schools and churches, and these they will soon maintain. The colony on Roanoke Island, under charge of Rev. Horace James, will be self-supporting within a year, as we are assured by the correspondent of the Herald; while Gen. Thomas' recent report shows that the leased plantations have been worked with profit under very disadvantageous circumstances. Let us be strengthened by these good results, and encouraged to fresh and increased efforts.

As soon as land, which they can cultivate, can be provided for the freed people along the Mississippi, and made secure from rebel raids, our contraband camps will be cleared, and their former occupants will be able to provide for their own physical wants. This cannot be until next Spring, and we shudder at the thought of the horrors of the coming Winter if aid is not freely given by the prosperous citizens of the Free States; but we trust that the cry of those ready to perish will not be in vain.

This appeal is now made especially in view of the immediate necessities of those people of the Mississippi—their physical needs will be first attended to—but all the freed people of the South and Southwest have been placed in our hands by the Father of us all, for education and Christian instruction, also, and money is needed, as well, for the maintenance of teachers and missionaries.

Let such as feel moved to contribute to this necessary, this humane, this National work, send warm clothing to C. C. Leigh, at the depot of the National Freedman's Relief Association, No. 1 Mercer-st., and money to Joseph B. Collins, Treasurer, No. 40 Wall-st.; or if they prefer it, to A. S. Fisk, Chaplain Fourth Minnesota volunteers, (who has been sent from Memphis to solicit aid, under authority from Gen. Grant,) care of Francis George Shaw, No. 86 Trinity building.

There is no record of any female English prose writer's ever having lived who possessed more than a portion of that genius which permeated Elizabeth Sheppard's whole being. Genius—the very word expresses her, in harmony with the great undertone of the universe, the soul suffused with light. Flower warmth and fragrance are on her page, the soft, low Summer wind seems to be speaking with you as you read, her characters are like the star impersonated, and still, however lofty her nature, always and forever genial."—Miss Prescott, in Atlantic Monthly.

Payment of Troops.

REPLY TO "OUTRAGEOUS DELAY IN SETTLING THE ACCOUNTS OF DECEASED SOLDIERS."

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Nov. 7, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I beg to reply to your Washington correspondent's dispatch, under the above head, in your paper of the 6th inst. In the course of it he says, in italics:

"The heirs of those who fell at Gettysburgh, in July, 1863, may not hope to be paid till November, 1864. The bare statement of this fact is the fullest censure of the scandalous imperfection of the machinery of the Second Auditor's office."

And then he contrasts the prompt payment of the dues of deceased sailors by the Navy Department, and insists that one of the first duties of Congress is the forcing upon the War Department a system of payment substantially like that of the navy.

Now I supposed your Washington correspondent too old a war horse to jumble matters militant together in so confused a manner. What particle of likeness is there between the organization of an army and a vessel-of-war at sea? The latter, the paymaster is cognizant of the state of the accounts of everybody on board, living or dead, it is only necessary for him to turn to the person's name on his roll to make out his account. This he can transmit, of course, at the first opportunity, to the Navy Department. But is that the case, or is it capable of being the case in the army? Can one particular army paymaster keep track of any one particular soldier amid all his various changings, in the movement of his regiment, in camp, or on the march, with his regiment or detached, on the battle-field or in the hospital? I would not make too sure that no improvement whatever could be devised; but certainly no two things so dissimilar as a vast army living about at different points of a country, hundreds of thousands of square smiles in extent, and a tucked-up ship at sea, 50 feet by 200, can ever be made examples for each other. The intensity of his commisseration for, no doubt, instances of suffering has warped your correspondent's judgment. Will he propose something?

He gratuitously exaggerates the actual evil, also. Fourteen months is the utmost delay to which anybody has been subjected; and the Second Auditor has had his force increased from time to time, as fast as rooms could be procured to put additional clerks into, until now it can settle claims quite as fast as they are made, and something faster, so that the tide has already turned, and the accumulations of claims, which have until recently been steadily rising, have now commenced to ebb; and my pretty confident guess is, that next May, or so, instead of "November, 1864," will see the Gettysburgh claims settled.

In justice to the Second Auditor, who is mentioned in such "scandalous" connection, it should be stated that this class of accounts does not reach his office, under reasonably favorable circumstances, short of five months; and then, allowing one month each to the Second Auditor's and Second Comptroller's offices, seven months have elapsed before the settlement, without let or hindrance.

Lastly, I would respectfully ask your correspondent how he would make his application of the Congressional screws upon the War Department affect the Treasury Department, which controls the payment of the accounts—and that is the gist of the thing, after all.

While on this subject of the payment of deceased soldiers' dues, allow me to direct claimants how to make application, so that they may save themselves not only the expense of agents, but trouble and anxiety, incident to a delay, (which, unfortunately, is unavoidable,) and their uncertainty about it.

MODE OF APPLYING FOR DECEASED SOLDIERS' ARREARS OF PAY AND BOUNTY.

Application, post-paid, should be made to "Hon. E. B. French, Second Auditor, Washington, D. C."

Mr. FRENCH wishes that claimants should be spared the expense of attorneys or agents, and to this end he will send blanks, and plain instructions how to fill them up, and how to proceed in all respects. But to attorneys, &c., he will send no information.

The application should be made by the nearest survivor in law to the deceased, as first, widow; second, children, collectively, (if minors, by guardians;) third, father; fourth, mother; fifth, brothers and sisters, collectively; sixth, next nearest relatives or heirs; by executors or administrators. The mother takes precedence of the father if the latter is drunken or otherwise unworthy of trust. The bounty will not be given to persons representative below the second degree, (children) unless provided of the United States. Neither will bounty be paid on the will of deceased.

The application should state the relationship of the applicant (one or more, he, she or they,) to the deceased, and what other nearest relations survive, so as to enable the Second Auditor to decide at once, and so inform the applicant, whether he is or is not the proper person to make the application. If the applicant is the proper person, blank affidavits and directions how to furnish the required proof of what the applicant has stated, that is, of the relationship which is entitled to the claim, &c., &c., will be sent to him. If the Auditor decide that the applicant is not the proper person, word will be sent to him to that effect, at the same time indicating which of the relatives named by the applicant is, and furnishing the blanks and instructions before mentioned.

On the return of the blanks duly executed, as directed, they are filed away, with all other applications of the same State, to await settlement in the order of the date of the death, and to this order there is no possible exception.

This work is all done by one set of clerks of the Division in charge of this class of accounts—receiving the applications, examining them, replying, instructing, correcting, briefing the letters, registering them, and collating the different papers of each case and placing them on file—this at the rate of about 7,000 a month—preparatory to the labors of another set, the auditing clerks proper. Meantime, the other set of clerks are employed examining the claims by the light of the Paymasters' rolls; and the amount due, if any, is reported to the Second Comptroller's Bureau. There, also, the claims undergo examination, and, as they pass that office, so the Second Comptroller confirms them, and orders them to be paid. They are then returned to the Second Auditor, and that officer issues a Government certificate for each amount, payable only to the applicant, or order, (never to an agent except on the indorsement of it by the applicant,) by the Paymaster of the District in which the applicant resides. The certificate is presented, in person or by letter, to the Paymaster, and the money is received of course; or, any bank convenient would no doubt cash it. That is the whole process for the applicant.

A principal reason for the greater delay in the payment of deceased than living soldiers is this: In paying living soldiers, the Paymaster has the enrolling officer's voucher for his guide as to what is due, and the living soldier present to pay the money, and to get a receipt from; and so he is warranted and secured in paying before Government audits and pronounces the claim correct. And Government is secure, on the other hand, because it holds the Paymaster responsible for correct payments, as they shall prove upon examination, after examination. If he has overpaid, the amount is stopped against him on his account, and he reimburses himself again by stopping the same amount against the soldier he has overpaid. But he cannot do any of these things in the case of a dead soldier; and Government is obliged to examine his account first, and order the precise amount to be paid, before any one will take the responsibility of paying it, and the account must be paid also to persons entitled to receive it, of which the Paymaster is not judge, and to persons out of the district to which the Paymaster is assigned, and confined in his duties.

In order, then, to this preliminary examination, the account, say of a death at Gettysburgh, in July, 1863, goes through the following routine. It appears on the muster-rolls of July and August, (two months usually being linked together,) which rolls are paid in the course of September and October following. In the month of November those rolls will be sent into the Paymaster-General's office; in another month (December) will be examined there, and then (after a lapse of five months) be sent to the Second Auditor's office. A month for examination in that office, and another month for the same in the Second Comptroller's, and in seven months the dues would be paid, but for the accumulation of claims before that, which must be settled first, and which accumulated when the forces of the Second Auditor's and Second Comptroller's respectively were unavailable [illegible] to the correct business.

Refraining from adding [illegible] the matter with more [illegible] the value of the space to [illegible], I am, very respectfully, your servant,

J. E.

CURE FOR NAILS GROWING INTO THE FLESH.—Dr. GAILLET, of Lyons, France, has published an account of the efficacy of the sesquichloride of iron for curing the growth of the toe nails into the flesh, and Dr. BILLON, commenting on this subject, says: "In 1858, Dr. WAHU, staff physician to the army, having succeeded with this remedy in curing the painful disease in question, I resorted to the same method, and with the greatest benefit in four cases. I may here remark that ulcers about the nails are occasionally observed among our soldiers, having escaped the attention of the medical boards, or being caused by the pressure of the boot during forced marches. Under these circumstances, a prompt and painless cure may be effected by inserting the dry sesquichloride between the nail and the protruding flesh, and powdering the latter with the same substance. A large bandage should be applied over all, not impregnated with the liquid sesquichloride of iron; a precaution which may, however, be useful, as the folds of the band dry rapidly, and preserve their situation in a more exact manner. On the following day the exuberant flesh is found to have acquired the hardness of wood; suppuration speedily ceases, and a cure follows after two or three applications. This simple and mild treatment is obviously far preferable to the numerous surgical procedures hitherto recommended. In the course of four or five days, or in a week at the farthest, the original pain ceases, the swelling subsides, and the patient is able to walk. Naught remains but the hardened protruding flesh, which falls away about a month after the application of the sesquichloride of iron. These are the results yielded by this method in four soldiers suffering from the growth of the nail into the flesh."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF NEW-ORLEANS.—The announcement is publicly made for the first time in our paper this morning, that measures have been taken here by some of our business men, to establish a bank under the recent law of Congress, on the subject of a national currency. The subscribers to the capital stock of the new bank comprise the names of the leading men of the city—men who are hereafter to have a controlling voice in the next Chamber of Commerce. We learn that $170,000 of the capital stock has already been taken, and the books are still open for those who may wish to invest. It is quite probable that by this time next year the bulk of the currency of the United States will be furnished by these National Banks.—New-Orleans Era, Nov. 1.

BRANDED SLAVES.—Col. HANKS, who recently arrived at the North from New-Orleans, where he has been in charge of the Louisiana freedmen, brings with him a man who is branded on the forehead with the name of his late master; a woman, whose back and shoulders are scarred with the lash of her oppressors; a preacher of the Gospel, until recently a slave; and three little white girls, with straight, light brown hair and blue eyes. They are good-looking children; indeed, one of them is very handsome. They were born in Slavery, and held as slaves until the President issued his Proclamation of Freedom.

SAUR KRAUT FOR THE SOLDIERS.—At Springfield, Ohio, the loyal folks are manufacturing huge quantities of saur kraut for the soldiers. The News says: "Barrel after barrel of the cabbages have been cut up and packed down with salt, ready for shipment. All day yesterday a four mule team was employed in hauling in the raw material. The scene inside the room was difficult properly to describe. Ladies and gentlemen in scores were 'pitching in' with all their might to 'manufacture' the cabbages as fast as they were brought in."

LAKE SUPERIOR SILVER.—The people around Marquette, Lake Superior, are wild over the rich deposits of silver in their neighborhood. In one locality it was believed that fifty tons of ore could be got out in a week. The veins are usually well defined, and of a character to be easily mined.

The Money market has operated to-day to the sensible relief of borrowers on the Stock Exchange. The rate keeps very firm at 7 ₱ cent., but the supply comes easier to good houses, and the change since day before yesterday tells strongly this afternoon on the speculative Shares at the Stock Board and on the Street. The Treasury received to-day $3,500,000 from the Associated Banks on the negotiation of Sept. 1, and $862,700 on the Popular Loan; but so large have been the disbursements from the office that they were largely in excess of the whole income of the day. The Money thus paid out returned in a good measure to the Banks, on that a large portion of these receipts was immediately returned to the Banks on drafts drawn from Washington in payment of November Certificates of Indebtedness and checks of disbursing officers in this City and neighborhood. To facilitate the easy working of the Money market, so far as the movements of the Government can influence it, the Secretary of the Treasury telegraphs this afternoon that he sends by express five millions of Legal Tender, from the office in Washington, for employment in New-York. And we understand that the Boston office has a considerable surplus of Legal Tender, which may also be transferred to New-York if needful.

The price of Gold maintains the advance of last night to 147¼ ₱ cent., and Bills on London are 161¼@162 ₱ cent. A fair business has been done in the latter for Saturday's packet. We hear of no important export engagements of Gold for Europe. There is some talk of a large remittance for French Government account to Vera Cruz, by the French War vessels now in this port, for the pay of the Army in Mexico, but to a late hour this afternoon there was no confirmation of the rumor. The correspondents here of Messrs. ROTHSCHILD drew to some extent on London and Paris last week, as for Gold in place of Currency, and this circumstance, and the fact of the rates drawn at being below the point at which it would be justifiable to remit the Gold to Paris, may have given rise to the conjecture that a different destination is intended. It is proper to add that if such a remittance should be made to Vera Cruz, on a French national ship, it would not necessarily be cleared at the Custom-house, and the fact could not be officially ascertained.

The Stock market opened at the early Board with a good degree of steadiness, and as the call of the Railway list proceeded, the bidding became quite firm, and the improvement continued through the remainder of the day. At the Second Board, and also on the Street, at 4 o'clock, the speculation in the upward direction was quite buoyant, and the following prices were made in comparison with Thursday night—the general market leaving off firm. The business at the Second Board and on the Street, in the afternoon was very large:

A very fair jobbing trade has been reported in all seasonable styles of Dry Goods this week. Stocks are quite moderate, especially of domestic Cottons and Woolens, and holders are very firm, generally, though there is less buoyancy in the market for imported dress goods, the available supply of which has been increased by the recent more liberal importations. The Philadelphia North American of this morning says: "There is a fair business doing in Dry Goods for the season, with both the Commission and Job houses, and Cotton goods generally are well held and firm, with reduced stocks of all the leading makes to operate in. Woolens are firm but quiet, the high views of holders checking the demand for most kinds."

The import entries of Foreign Dry Goods at the port of New-York for the week ending Nov. 12 were $967,630, against $761,718 same week last year, and $434,298 the corresponding week of 1861. The following is the summary for the week:

A partisan morning journal is disturbed by the reference made in this column a day or two since to the abuse of the proxy system by the executive officers of the New-York Central Road. Its fears as to any purpose to underrate the value of the property, or to control the management for stock-jobbing ends, may be dismissed at once. The productive value of the stock is undoubted. The complaint is that other and less worthy objects than to sustain the stock at its true intrinsic worth have governed the executive management for several years past. The control of thirty-eight millions of capital, and eleven millions gross income thereon, has been found too convenient for personal gains and political rule, for the interest and cash dividends of the shareholders. In other words, they derive less than two-thirds the net income which should be periodically divided to them on so magnificent a business. This is the complaint. Under proper explanations it may not prove altogether just, but when the honesty or good faith with which it is respectfully made, on the eve of an annual meeting of the Company, is impeached, we feel authorized to turn upon these managers the more direct charge of personal jobbery and partisan favoritism, in disposing of a portion of the income of the last year or two, which should, in all fairness, have gone into the pockets of the shareholders, or else be accounted for on strict business principles. The jobbery in car building, wheel contracts, hardware supplies, and real estate purchases in and around Albany and Troy, and it may be on the Western end of the road, may not be at an extravagant cost to the road, if such contracts and purchases are absolutely needful. It may be, too, that no ironmonger in the country is better able to manufacture car wheels and furnish rails, spikes, &c., cheap for cash, than Mr. CORNING and his partners in Albany and Troy. We only object to the proxy system, by virtue of which his power to award these jobs to himself is made self-perpetuating.

On the other point of partisan influence and its abuse, there is a grave question beyond the mere propriety of using or prostituting this large property to such ends. The majority of the great proprietary of 240,000 shares, we undertake to say, are not of Mr. CORNING'S or Mr. PRUYN'S way of supporting the war in which the nation is now engaged. They would not knowingly, we believe, have their money spent to enrich an iron mill, in Troy or elsewhere, whose laborers turn out, on occasion, to burn or sack a loyal printing-office, nor is it likely they would go out of their way to promote the advancement, by the use of their means, of an executive officer, who, making politics part of his trade—after duly receiving his fat official salary from the road—is ambitious of placing himself on the State Senate record, in a minority of one, against the prosecution of the War.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher Among the Passengers.

HALIFAX, Friday, Nov. 13.

The steamship Asia, Capt. HOCKLEY, from Liverpool at 10½ o'clock A. M. on the 31st of October, and Queenstown on the evening of the 1st inst., arrived here at 1 o'clock this morning. Her dates are two days later than those already received.

The Asia has 55 passengers for Halifax and 50 for Boston. Among the passengers in the Asia are Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER and Col. LAMAR, one of the Secessionist emissaries to Europe. On the day before his departure, Mr. BEECHER was entertained at a farewell breakfast by the Liverpool Emancipation Society. Complimentary addresses were addressed to Mr. BEECHER, who made a speech of warm friendship for England.

The Asia reports experiencing a succession of westerly gales during the passage.

The steamship Saxonia, from New-York, reached Southampton at noon on the 29th of October.

The steamship Persia, from New-York, arrived at Queenstown at 10 o'clock on the morning of the 31st of October.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Furious gales have prevailed around the coast of England, but no shipping disasters had, as yet, been reported.

The iron-clad frigate Prince Consort, from Plymouth for Liverpool, in connection with the Mersey rams, was seriously disabled, and put into Kingstown, where she remained leaking and half full of water, and otherwise considerably damaged.

In London a railway engine depot had been blown down, and three or four lives were lost.

Among the new companies which had been announced, is the National Steam Navigation Company of London and Liverpool, with a capital of two millions sterling. The object is to accelerate the substitution of powerful screw steamers for sailing vessels in American and other trades. The first step will be to establish lines from Liverpool and London to New-York of steamers of large size and capacity for freight and passengers. Three new steamers have been provisionally purchased and contracts made for others of 3,500 tons each.

The steamer Bezanza, from Liverpool, at Lisbon, was searched in the Bay of Biscay by the privateer Georgia, and asked for newspapers and shipping intelligence.

The Mersey rams remained in the possession of armed marines. The work on them had been suspended. Two gunboats also kept watch over LAIRD's yard.

The London Times editorially criticises the iron-clad navies of England, France and America, and draws the conclusion that England is not in arrear of the age, and if she has anything to learn it is only in matter of detail.

W. F. LINDSAY and GEORGE N. SANDERS again figure in the London Times as combatants of the doctrines advanced by the Times' correspondent, "Historicus."

Mr. LINDSAY elaborately attempts to prove that England favors the North at the expense of the South, and maintains that if the same measure of justice is not meted out to both belligerents, the professions of impartial neutrality by England, are mere empty words!

"Historicus" responds to Mr. LINDSAY, and, in answer to one of his inquiries as to "how he ('Historicus') should vote when the claims against England for the depredations by the Alapama were brought before Parliament," promises that by the time that question is put from the Speaker's chair, "Mr. LINDSAY will certainly be the father of the House."

Other questions of Mr. LINDSAY are also answered, and "Historicus" points out that no act of Parliament forbids English merchants for manufacturing cannon for the belligerents; but as to equipping vessels-of-war, there is an act expressly forbidding it.

The bankruptcy of Z. C. PEARSON was under investigation, and it was furnishing new developments in regard to blockade running. Mr. PEARSON claims over £87,000 from the Federal Government for illegal captures, and £93,000 from the Confederate Government for their refusal to fulfill their contract.

The Board of Trade returns for September show an increase in exports of 28 per cent. over the corresponding month of last year, and the figures thus far for the whole year indicate that it will be a year of the greatest commercial prosperity that England has yet attained.

Voluminous correspondence relative to the Japanese difficulty is published in the London Morning Herald, which attacks the Ministers for their violence toward Japan.

FRANCE.

The Empress EUGENIE has returned from her trip to Spain.

The Mexican Consuls in Paris, Bordeaux and Havre have been compelled to cease their functions. The duties of their office have been temporarily transferred to the Consuls for Guatemala.

The long-projected plan of making Paris a seaport by a ship canal is revived.

The Paris Bourse continued flat.

THE DANISH QUESTION.

The reply of the Danish Government to the resolution of the German Diet, to send the Army of Execution to Holstein, had been read to the Diet.

The reply is conciliatory in form, but on all essential points maintains the views of the Danish Government.

The Representative of Denmark said that his Government was open to mediation.

A third note from Earl RUSSELL on the Holstein question had been communicated to the Federal Diet. It endeavors to form a basis for mediation.

POLAND.

Warsaw advices announce an increase in the tyrannic and arbitrary rule of Russia.

Hundreds of young men had been arrested, searched, stripped to the skin and beaten.

A letter by Prince NAPOLEON expresses an earnest wish that France will not allow Poland to be annihilated.

PRUSSIA.

Out of the three hundred and forty-five members already chosen to the Prussian Chambers, two hundred and sixty are Liberals.

AUSTRIA.

The Finance Committee of the Reichrath have passed a resolution granting twenty millions of florins to relieve the distress prevailing in Hungary.

MONETARY AND COMMERCIAL MATTERS.

The Bank of Frankfort has advanced its rate of discount from 3½ to 4 ₱ cent., and the Bank of Holland from 3 to 3¼. It is rumored that the Bank of France will further advance its rate of discount, owing to the continued drain of bullion.

The London Money and Stock Markets continued unsettled, but Consols were without material fluctuation. There was rather more demand for discounts on the 30th of October, but the rates remained without change.

FROM MRS. C. NEWCOMB.

NEW-YORK, March 7, 1863.

DR. HYDE—Dear Sir: It affords me much pleasure to contribute my testimony in favor of your new mode of applying electricity, which, in my case, has resulted far beyond my most sanguine expectations. After having been under the treatment of nine different physicians within the last three years, during which time I was suffering from aphonia, (or loss of voice,) and had almost despaired of ever speaking aloud again, I was induced to try your new mode, and, strange to say, after the sixth or seventh application, my voice returned, and I now feel that I am restored to the enjoyment of life and society, to which I have been comparatively a stranger. I will add that I had previously tried electricity applied very differently from your system, without any relief. With the hope that others similarly unfortunate may receive like benefit, you are at liberty to refer any person to me, at No. 4 Hubert-st. MRS. C. NEWCOMB.

FROM G. S. WASHBURN, ESQ., OF McKEAN, PENN.

McKEAN, Penn., July 14, 1862.

DR. H. T. HYDE—Dear Sir: I send you a statement of the effect of electricity upon myself, with permission to use it for the benefit of others if you desire to do so. For thirteen years I have been afflicted with the asthma, and during that time there have been but few months in which I did not suffer with a paroxysm that entirely prostrated me for four or five days, and sometimes longer, until I had become worn down by disease. In a bad attack I have sat up for seven nights in succession. The least active exercise would bring it on. About the 1st of March last I placed myself under your care, and almost immediately I felt like a different being. I have gained over twenty pounds in weight, and am able to do considerable work. It has also improved my general health, and given me a greater power of endurance than I ever had. Yours truly, G. S. WASHBURN.

CATARRH CURED

BY

DR. VON EISENBERG,

AT HIS CONSULTING ROOMS,

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH.

No. 23 Forsyth-st., NEW-YORK, Oct. 1, 1863.

Dr. Von Eisenberg:

DEAR SIR: Without recapitulating the numerous benefits I have received through your wonderful cure of the deafness I have labored under many years, the blessings I enjoy will convince the most sceptical.

I have tried many aurists, in Europe and America, without success. I was still deaf as a post.

Three years ago I entered your office, underwent one operation, hoping, yet doubting, I should receive any relief, but was agreeably disappointed in finding the genius of your profession.

The innate skill you possess cured my deafness in one almost painless operation.

The joy I experienced was indescribable; 'twas a new life to me.

My hearing is perfect to this day.

I strongly advise all who are suffering under a difficulty of hearing or total deafness, to consult you immediately as I also personally recommend all who apply to me. The numerous calls trespass on my time and patience, yet, remembering my own long, weary affliction, causes me to pity them.

This is not written to advertise your well-known, unrivaled reputation—that would be puerile; but as a measure of precaution to induce all to call on you at once without troubling me; yet I do not refuse to see any one who comes to me. This is the only way I can show my gratitude.

I also call the attention of those who are suffering from Catarrh, which disease I have labored under one year or more.

I experienced difficulty in breathing, langour, heaviness over the eyes, a sense of tightness on the brain, and copious expectorations of a hard and viscid nature. Accompanying this is a "polypus," quite filling the right nostril. On the 25th ult. you operated on both, killing the polypus, which is gradually passing away, and giving me great relief from the Catarrh. One more operation will effectually cure.

This testimonial brings with it my unalloyed and grateful thanks, with but a poor delineation of your wondrous skill as an Aurist.

I am, Sir, yours very gratefully,
EDWARD TEMPLE HARRISON.

IODINE WATER:

A SOLUTION OF PURE IODINE IN PURE WATER.

PREPARED ONLY BY

DR. H. ANDERS & CO.,

Physicians and Chemists,

NO. 428 BROADWAY, NEW-YORK.

IT ACTS UPON THE HEART,

LIVER, KIDNEYS,

DIGESTIVE ORGANS, AND GLANDULAR SYSTEM,

The unparalleled success in private practice and the indorsement of

HIGH MEDICAL AUTHORITY

enable us to recommend

IODINE WATER

for the cure of Scrofula in all forms, Consumption, Cancer, Bronchitis, Heart, Liver and Kidney Diseases; Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Nervous Affections, Female Weaknesses, Dyspepsia, Syphilis, Mercurial Disease, etc.

AS A TONIC,

its operation is evinced by strengthening the digestive organs and exciting the appetite. In cases of Dyspepsia, Emaciation and Debility, an increased nutrition of the body is the result of the employment of Iodine Water. The patient recovers flesh, strength and color; hitherto pale, relaxed and feeble, he becomes full, strong and florid.

Iodine Water is put up with full directions around each bottle, that it may be used as a family medicine as well as by the practitioner.

Physicians may rely upon the uniform strength of this solution, as containing ¼ grains of Iodine in each fluid ounce pure water—no solvent being used. It is not liable to decomposition nor spontaneously formed inequalities; neither is the Iodine neutralized by combination with any ingredient, and as no unpleasant or injurious results can arise from its continued use, this solution will be found superior to any other method in which Iodine can be exhibited.

The great success which has attended the use of Iodine Water in our own practice, and in the hands of those who have used it, enables us to recommend it to the practitioner and the public as a superior remedy for the cure of Chronic diseases, which have resisted other treatment, feeling confident that with a fair trial it will attest its own excellence.

The genuineness of this solution and its excellence as a medicine are attested by the names of such distinguished men as Dr. Jas. R. Chilton, Professor E. H. Parker, Professor Jas. C. Booth, Dr. E. Whitney, Dr. H. Klinpstein, and others.

Price $1 per bottle, $5 per half dozen. Sold by Druggists generally.

TESTIMONIALS.

The Bible Examiner for August, 1863, edited by the Rev. George Storrs, contains the following editorial notice:

"IODINE WATER.—In this number of our magazine we introduce to the attention of our readers this medical preparation. We have done so, not for pay, nor because our pages are used as a medium of advertisements—for we have uniformly declined them—but gratitude to God, and a sense of obligation to Dr. Anders & Co., have made us insert the following:

"My only son, George F. Storrs, now 37 years old, has been afflicted, for some dozen years, more or less, with painful swellings and inflammations in various parts of his body; oftentimes, seemingly, he was near to death; then a respite for a season, but only for a return of the disease with more violence. For the past three years he has had an open sore on his breast; and latterly one near his collar bone, with ulceration in his throat, that was rapidly increasing, so that dissolution appeared inevitable. In this condition he applied to Dr. Anders & Co. By the use of the Iodine Water the ulceration in his throat disappeared in a short time. Continuing its use, in less than two months he was apparently healed, and his general health much improved. This son, whom I had feared would fall asleep in death before this Summer should close, is now, apparently, in a fair way to recover as perfect health as is common to our mortal state. In gratitude to God, who has thus answered prayer, and in justice to Dr. Anders & Co., I have made this statement, satisfied that there is virtue in the Iodine Water treatment which the readers of this magazine will thank its editor for bringing to their notice. Price $1 in paper, or $1 50 in cloth. 1 vol., 12mo, 500 pages.

THE FATAL MARRIAGE. By Mrs. EMMA D. E. N. SOUTHWORTH.—The author of this book is, beyond all question, one of the most powerful female writers in America, if not in the world. No one ever read a chapter of one of her works without wishing to read the whole book, and none ever read one of her books without admiring the rare genius of its author, and wishing that she might soon write another. Her scenes are life-pictures; her incidents are founded on facts, and her sentiments are characterized by a singular purity both of conception and expression. She has the rare faculty of saying what she means, and of saying it in such a manner as that her meaning cannot be misinterpreted. In short, she possesses in an eminent degree those qualifications which are the peculiar prerogatives of a good writer; and while she delights the reader's imagination with her descriptive beauty, she applies home truths to his understanding with the force of rational conviction. The "FATAL MARRIAGE" will be welcomed by all such readers especially; and those who have never read the works of this gifted woman should not fail to buy and read the "FATAL MARRIAGE." It is published by T. B. PETERSON & BROTHERS, Philadelphia, and will be found for sale by all booksellers everywhere.

THE FATAL MARRIAGE is published this day, and is for sale by all Booksellers, complete in one volume, cloth, for $1 50. We also publish a "Railway Edition" of it, complete in one volume, paper cover. Price $1.

FROM AUTHOR'S PREFACE.—"If the reader will so far favor the author as to suppose that, when a young man, he taught the district school in Jonesville, 'boarding around,' according to the primitive New-England fashion; that he has kept himself acquainted with the lives and fortunes of his old friends and pupils there; that they have known something of him, and through an officious representative of the family, have requested him to write these letters for the public eye, which he had no time to write for their private readings—I say, if the reader will suppose all this, he will supply all the necessary machinery of the book, and the writer will have his justification for the direct and homely tone in which he indulges toward the family."

NOTICE.

To the Stockholders of the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company.

The increasing business of the Company and anticipated connections with other Railroads render it expedient forthwith to extend the double track from its present terminus at Williams Bridge to Chatham Four Corners, and to complete the road from that place through to Albany.

For the purpose of meeting the necessary outlays attending such constructions, and to defray the expenses incident to the extensions of the City Railroad already authorized, the Board of Directors have resolved that it is expedient to increase the Capital Stock to such amount, not exceeding the limitation of the Charters, as may be sanctioned by the requisite vote of the Stockholders, and to issue the increased stock from time to time as may be required for the purposes of completing such double track and extensions and procuring the necessary additional rolling stock.

The amount of the Capital Stock, as limited by the charter and amendatory acts, and including both the Common and Preferred Stock, is eight millions of dollars, of which two millions one hundred and thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars remained unissued.

The Board of Directors propose that the Capital Stock be increased to its full amount.

A meeting of the Stockholders for the purpose of acting upon such resolution of the Board of Directors and of concurring in the increase of the Capital Stock to the full amount, authorized by the Charter and the several acts of the Legislature amendatory thereof, will be held at the Office of the Company, at the corner of 26th-st. and 4th-av., on TUESDAY, the first day of December next, at 12 o'clock noon of that day.

For the purpose of ascertaining the Stockholders who shall be entitled to vote at such meeting, the Books of Transfer will be closed, as required by law, on Saturday, the 7th day of November inst., the day of the first publication of this notice.

The Books will be open on Tuesday, the 10th day of November inst.

Dated, New-York, Nov. 6, 1863,
By order of the Board of Directors.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 28 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call; it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st., the only place. Call, send for a circular, or write.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SUCCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 50 Lispenard-st. Conceted on the plan of the Hospital des Veuriens, Paris, where those afflicted with any form of private disease can receive prompt treatment, without risk or exposure, viz.: Syphilis, gonorrhœa gleet, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancers, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice, exclusively devoted to the treatment of those complaints enable us to effect cures in cases where others of less experience have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in four weeks. This marvelous agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution—physical disqualifications, impediments to marriage, dispelled speedily cured. The means to consult, Drs. Ward and Powers, the champions and kings of venereal diseases, possessing the most certain, speedy and only effectual remedies in the world, guarantee a perfect cure, or no charge, in from one to three days. Established in 1830. Those who have used their remedies are welcome without, to send for a circular. To Ladies—Dr. Powers' Periodical Drops are a safe and certain remedy for monthly irregularities. The above remedies sent by mail. The afflicted should read their circular. Postage free, on receipt of a stamp. Cures warranted.

MANHOOD AND THE VIGOR OF YOUTH regained in three days by Dr. POWERS' ESSENCE OF LIFE. This wonderful agent restores manhood to the most shattered constitution, radically curing Seminal Weakness, Sexual Debility, and impediments to marriage generally; Nervousness, Mental and Physical Incapacity, resulting from self-abuse, &c. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is one week. Failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. Young man, are you subject to that soul and body destroying disease, secret habits? Dr. POWERS' invigorating Essence is a never-failing cure. Sold by WALTER POWERS, M. D., No. 50 Lispenard-st., between Broadway and Church-st., New-York.

A PHYSIOLOGICAL VIEW OF MARRIAGE containing nearly 300 pages, and 100 fine plates and engravings of the anatomy of the sexual organs in a state of health and disease, with a treatise on self-abuse, its deplorable consequences upon the mind and body, with the author's plan of treatment—the only rational and successful mode of cure, as shown by the report of cases treated. A truthful adviser to the married and those contemplating marriage, who content-plain double of their physical condition. Sent, free of charge, for any addition, on receipt of 25 cents, in specie or postage-stamps. Address Dr. LA CROIX, No. 31 Maiden-lane, Albany, N. Y.
